An Immodest Look at 45 Years of Learning

The first fourteen years of my life was spent in the Coachella Valley, near Palm Springs, California. I was raised by my single father until his untimely death, and then moved to Orange County, California to live with family. The next four years of my life were spent living with various family members including my mother from time to time. I was not a very good student and lacked parental guidance so I really did not get much out of school, my GPA was about 2.5. Four years later, upon finishing high school I was under the assumption that I would just stumble into a career. I had never been asked by my mother or other family members what my plan was for a career. I am even embarrassed to say that in high school when I heard other seniors talking about taking SAT's, I had no idea what they were talking about. Because college was never on my mind, I just moved from job to job looking for something that fit. Although some of the jobs were fun, none could sustain a family, which is what I wanted. In retrospect, I realize that these experiences caused me to develop a sense of independence and self-reliance. These character traits in turn prepared me for a life long journey of learning and overachieving.

About eight years after high school and having worked in several different fields, I decided on the fire service as a career and enrolled in a junior college, I was 26. The impetus for that decision was meeting my wife and wanting to have a steady job that would provide for a family. Looking back at those days I realize that I was intelligent but uneducated. Over the past eighteen years I realize that I have grown intellectually as a result of my formal education and experience living and working with purpose. Nearly eighteen years ago, I met and married my wife after knowing her for nine months. Meeting her and making that decision to pursue the fire service have been two of the most important things to occur in my life. Finally, after 26 years I had developed clear goals and set a plan in action to achieve them. I spent the next several years in school and working to further develop my interpersonal communication skills and study habits. As I worked with a new group of peers in school and operating an ambulance, I began to develop a reputation as a studious and professional individual. This in turn caused me to develop personal confidence in a new area of my life.

My time in junior college was very busy. I was working twelve hour shifts on an ambulance four days per week and attending classes on the three days I had off. This working environment provided a great opportunity to work on my leadership and communication skills. I continued this pace for two years until I had finished all of the classes qualifying me for the fire academy. I even made time to get married, although our honey moon was cut short by my classes! Shortly after finishing the fire science classes I enrolled in paramedic prerequisite classes to prepare paramedic school. My plan was to finish the academy and get into paramedic school as soon as possible. The fire academy is fourteen weeks of classroom and simulated fire ground training. Paramedic school is six months broken up into three
