Summer time is, among many other things, movie time in Rhode Island, highlighted by the Rhode Island International Film Festival, the largest in New England, which runs Tuesday-Sunday, Aug. 6-11.

Additional cinematic treats include newportFILM and outdoor screenings in Providence and Newport.

Flickers: Rhode Island International Film Festival

The event will feature the screening of a record 200 films at a number of locations throughout the state, including in Providence, Newport, Jamestown and Westerly. Last year, three films that premiered at the festival were subsequently nominated for Oscars.

Highlights this year include a showcase of Japanese, Francophone and French films, in addition to films from 60 countries, with some as far afield as South Africa, India, China and Ireland.

Select films from New England filmmakers will also be featured. There will also be chances to rub shoulders with the local movie community at the Rhode Island Film Forum and to attend a screenwriting workshop at Scripps in 2013. Reopened, plus a tour of film locations in Providence.

And on Aug. 9-10, the KidzLife International Film Festival will showcase the work of young local and national filmmakers.

newportFILM

While Flickers, the Rhode Island International Film Festival is celebrating its 17th year, newportFILM is a relative newcomer, having gotten its start in 2010.

NewportFILM is sponsoring a wide range of film-related activities over the summer. Movie screenings include "Get Him" on June 27 and "Running Wild" on Aug. 8 at the Newport International Polo Grounds. Movies that have been confirmed but have yet to be assigned a date, time or place include "The Short Game," "The Summit" and "Blood Brothers."

NewportFILM is also hosting outdoor evenings of "Post-Beach Family Fun & Film Shorts" at Sweet Berry Farm in Middletown. The fun includes live entertainment, followed by a showing of N.Y. International Children's Film Festival shorts.

The first date is June 25, while the second, in August, has yet been determined.

For more information, go to newportfilm.com.

A showing of "Get Him" will be held on Aug. 8 at the Newport International Polo Grounds.
