A Companion to the Roman Army Paul Erdkamp, 2011-03-31 This companion provides an extensive account of the Roman army exploring its role in Roman politics and society as well as the reasons for its effectiveness as a fighting force An extensive account of the Roman army from its beginnings to its transformation in the later Roman Empire Examines the army as a military machine its recruitment training organization tactics and weaponry Explores the relationship of the army to Roman politics economics and society more broadly Considers the geography and climate of the lands in which the Romans fought Each chapter is written by a leading expert in a particular subfield and takes account of the latest scholarly and archaeological research in that area The Divine Panoply; Or, A Suit of Armour for the Soldier of Christ J.

Walker, 1846 Blood of the Provinces Ian Haynes, 2013-10-03 This is the first fully comprehensive study of the auxilia a non citizen force which constituted more than half of Rome s celebrated armies Diverse in origins character and culture they played an essential role in building the empire sustaining the unequal peace celebrated as the pax Romana and enacting the emperor s writ On Bosses of Roman Shields Found in Northumberland and Lancashire Franks, 1857 The Roman Army Pat Southern, 2007 This volume spans over a thousand years as it offers a picture of one of the world s most noted fighting forces paying special attention to the life of the common soldier from publisher description FROM WARRIORS TO SOLDIERS Ruben Ygua, 2025-08-20 Military History is a discipline of the humanities that focuses on recording the armed conflicts of human history and their impact on societies their cultures economies and changes in international relations It is not limited to the study of battles and wars but is also interested in the evolution of materials weaponry tactics and strategy It is composed of all those events in human history that can be considered as belonging to the category of generalized social conflicts This can range from fights between two tribes to wars between two organized armed forces including at their maximum scale the world wars that affect the majority of the human population Professional historians usually concentrate on the military events that have had the greatest impact on the societies involved while amateur historians pay more attention to details of battles equipment or uniforms Historians are responsible for narrating these events through writing or in other ways Military activity has been a constant process for thousands of years and the tactics strategies and goals of military operations have remained basically unchanged over the millennia For example a notable military maneuver still studied today is the double wrap around clip used by Hannibal Barca in the Battle of Cannas in 216 BC Some 2 200 years ago That same maneuver was already described by the Chinese military theorist Sun Tzu who wrote about the same time as the foundation of Rome approximately 2 750 years ago and 500 years before the Battle of Cannas By studying history related to their profession the military aims to avoid repeating the same mistakes of the past and thus improve their performance by instilling in their commanders the ability to perceive historical parallels during a battle and thus to maximize the lessons learned from it The main areas of military history include the history of wars battles and combat the history of military art and the history of each specific military service There are several ways to categorize war One of them is the distinction between conventional and unconventional warfare where conventional refers to well identified armed forces fighting each other relatively openly and directly without weapons of mass destruction Unconventional warfare refers to other types of warfare including raids guerrilla warfare insurgency and terrorism Alternatively it can include nuclear warfare chemical warfare or biological warfare All of these categories are usually integrated into two other higher order categories high and low intensity warfare High intensity warfare is warfare between two superpowers or large nations fighting for political and or economic interests Low intensity warfare refers to insurgency against a dominant army guerrilla warfare and special types of troops fighting a revolution archaeological debates about Rome's expansion beyond these traditional geographical boundaries and the discipline based previous research. The entire north western Mediterranean is treated as a micro region and is addressed using various interdisciplinary approaches. The result is to provide an innovative and comprehensive overview of the north western Mediterranean in a period of historical crossroads aided particularly by focusing on the connectivity and integration within this region as two interrelated issues. While Republican Rome enforced itself as an expansive power towards the West, all sorts of polities, military operations and individuals also played a significant role in creating interconnectivity and integration of the north western Mediterranean into a new hybrid reality. In order to uncover such processes of hybridisation, contributors to this volume were encouraged to focus on the historical archaeological and numismatic material from several areas within the region and to incorporate aspects of interdisciplinary methodologies in order to address the region's military, political, social and economic interconnections with Italy, Rome and each other within the overall period.

Warfare in Northern Europe Before the Romans Julie Wileman, 2014-03-31. This book traces the developments in the defences, weaponry and armour of the northern barbarians from the earliest traces of stone age aggression to the sophisticated warfare of the tribes who met the Romans in battle. It uses evidence from monuments such as the great hillforts of the Bronze and Iron Ages including Maiden Castle in Dorset and Alesia in France as well as the amazing archaeological finds seen in museums and collections across northern Europe. Period by period, the ways in which the peoples of Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and Scandinavia developed defensive and offensive strategies are brought together for those interested in both military history and in the development of our societies and countryside. Evidence from many countries is used to shed light on the centuries before written records and to redress the balance of our understanding which has often been too heavily influenced by Roman propaganda.
