Few people doubt that humans are descended from the apes; fewer still consider let alone accept the psychological implications. But in truth, man not only looks, moves, and breathes like an ape, he also thinks like one. Sexual drive, survival, competition, aggression: all of our impulses are driven by our human instincts. They explain why a happily married man will fantasize about the pretty, slim young woman sitting across from him in the tube and why thousands of people spend their week entirely focused on whether their team will win their next crucial match. But how well do our instincts equip us for the twenty-first century? Do they help or hinder us as we deal with large, anonymous cities, stressful careers, relationships, and the battle of the sexes? In this fascinating book, Robert Winston takes us on a journey deep into the human mind. Along the way, he takes a very personal look at the relationship between science and religion and explores those very instincts that make us human. A Child Against All Odds Lord Robert Winston, 2011-04-13 Compared to the famously fecund rabbit for whom a single act of coitus has a 90% chance of creating a litter of up to 12 rabbits, humans are very infertile animals. Here in the UK, the average chance of conception is about 18% per month. And in 98% of cases successful conception leads only to the birth of a single infant It is unsurprising then that huge efforts have been made to increase our fertility In vitro fertilisation first attempted one hundred years ago has now become big business Market forces combined with the desperation of many couples to fulfil their biological imperative have pushed doctors and scientists closer to the boundaries of what is desirable or ethical And as we are increasingly able to access and control the embryo the opportunities of altering human genetics to eradicate disease but also to change human characteristics becomes a real and to some frightening possibility A Child Against All Odds is a ground breaking book for Robert Winston as it falls squarely in his area of expertise It combines his work at Hammersmith Hospital as one of the country s leading fertility specialists with a hard hitting sometimes humorous often controversial look at the scientific social and ethical background of man s struggle to discover and control the secrets of reproduction Drawing on personal and professional experience it is the definitive account of modern reproductive technology from a practitioner who has spent his professional life at the forefront of this most fascinating and emotive area of science

Bad Ideas? Lord Robert Winston, 2010-04-13 We are born with the instinct to create and invent Indeed our ability to do so is what separates us from the rest of the animal world But have our creative ideas always produced desirable results Have they always served us well Bad Ideas traces the fascinating history of our attempts at self improvement but also questions their value The dubious consequences of the development of weaponry for example is self evident But what of apparently more innocuous advances such as farming writing and medicine Science has produced huge good but has also had unforeseen consequences Can science and scientists find solutions to the perils that now menace us We join Robert Winston on a thrilling journey from our earliest days to the present We meet some key individuals along the way and share quirky anecdotes about their lives and brainwaves Inspiring unusual and at times controversial Bad Ideas assesses the past and looks forward to the opportunities of the future In so doing it celebrates man's extraordinary capacity for achievement and offers a hopeful way forward to protect humanity against what sometimes seem like bad ideas The Birth Control Book Howard I. Shapiro, 1978 The Human Mind Robert M. L. Winston, 2004 Robert Winston takes us deep into the workings of the human mind revealing how our senses emotions and personality are the result of a ballet of genes and environment that shapes the path of our lives Bodies in Glass Deborah Lynn Steinberg, 1997 An imaginative and original reappraisal of reproductive science Bodies in glass explores the complex cultural landscape and emergent iconographic bodies of in vitro fertilisation IVF and medical genetic discourse Through a compelling deconstruction of medical and legal languages texts and institutional practices Deborah Lynn Steinberg traces the convergence of four key logics authorial recombinant embryo protectionist and eugenic which she argues are embedded in the field of IVF the textual material processes of erasure and recombination of women s bodies and reproductive fitness
