Three Men of Badajos, The Seventh Man I swa Three Ships, and A Blue Pantomime Sir Arthur Thomas Quiller-Couch, 1908-01-01 YOU enter the village of Gantick between two round houses set one on each side of the high road where it dips steeply towards the valley bottom On the west of the opposite hill the road passes out between another pair of round houses And down in the heart of the village among the elms facing the churchyard lych gate stands a fifth alone The five therefore form an elongated St Andrew s cross but nobody can tell for certain who built them or why They are all alike each built of cob circular whitewashed having pointed windows and a conical roof of thatch with a wooden cross on the apex When I was a boy these thatched roofs used to be pointed out to me as masterpieces and they still endure But the race of skilled thatchers once the peculiar pride of Gantick has come to an end What time has eaten modern and clumsy hands have tried to repair yet a glance will tell you that the old sound work means to outwear the patches The last of these famous thatchers lived in the round house on your right as you leave Gantick by the seaward road His name was old Nat Ellery or Thatcher Ellery and his age as I remember him between seventy or eighty Yet he clung to his work being one of those lean men upon whom age exposure and even drink take a long while to tell For he drank not socially at the Ring of Bells but at home in solitude with a black bottle at his elbow He lived there alone his neighbours even of the round house across the road shunned him and were shunned by him children would run rather than meet him on the road as he came along striding swiftly for his age the drink never affected his legs ready greaved and sometimes gauntleted as if in haste for his job always muttering to himself and when he passed us with just a side glance from his red eyes we observed that his pale face did not cease to twitch nor his lips to work We felt something like awe for the courage of Archie Passmore who followed twenty paces behind with his tools and a bundle of spars or straw rope or perhaps at the end of a ladder which the two carried between them Archie aged sixteen used to boast to us that he did not fear the old man a ha penny and the old man treated Archie as a Gibeonite a hewer of wood a drawer of water never as an apprentice Of his craft except what he picked up by watching the lad learned nothing
