White,1998 China s dramatic reforms are usually said to have been caused by the policies of state leaders under Deng Xiaoping This fascinating new study by one of the West s leading authorities on contemporary China shows however that reforms began and are maintained by local networks They emerged first in the economy partly as unintended results of previous policies Agricultural extension in Mao Zedong s time freed so much labor from the land in rich areas such as the Shanghai delta that peasant leaders set up rural industries to employ clients Many of these leaders were avowed state cadres but they acted for local constituencies more than for Beijing Their initiatives can be documented in the early 1970s long before the 1978 proclamation of new enterprises which the central bureaucracy could not monitor taking materials and markets away from state industries This caused socialist control of input prices and commodity flows to collapse by the mid 1980s As a result shortages and inflation bedeviled the economy the state ran deficits management decentralized local banks proliferated and immigration to cities soared      Handbook of Contemporary Behavioral Economics Morris Altman,2006 This groundbreaking handbook of original works by leading behavioral economists is the first comprehensive articulation of behavioral economics theory At a time when conventional approaches have failed to resolve key economic concerns the book provides a provocative alternative view of how economic decisions are actually made      Library Mashups Nicole C.
