The Lives of Sumerian Sculpture Jean M. Evans, 2012-10-08 This book

examines the sculptures created during the Early Dynastic period 2900-2350 BC of Sumer a region corresponding to present day southern Iraq. Featured almost exclusively in temple complexes, some 550 Early Dynastic stone statues of human figures carved in an abstract style have survived. Chronicling the intellectual history of ancient Near Eastern art history and archaeology at the intersection of sculpture and aesthetics, this book argues that the early modern reception of Sumer still influences ideas about these sculptures. Engaging also with the archaeology of the Early Dynastic temple, the book ultimately considers what a stone statue of a human figure has signified both in modern times and in antiquity.

Egypt in the Eastern Mediterranean During the Old Kingdom Karin Sowada, 2009. This study presents a revised view of Egyptian foreign relations in the eastern Mediterranean during the Old Kingdom 3rd-6th Dynasties based on an extensive analysis of old and new archaeological data and its relationship to the well-known textual sources. The material demonstrates that while Egypt's most important relationships were with Byblos and the Lebanese coast, generally it was an active participant in the geo-political and economic affairs of the Levant throughout much of the third millennium BCE. The archaeological data shows that the foundation of these relationships was established at the beginning of the Early Dynastic Period and essentially continued until the end of the 6th Dynasty with ebbs, flows, and changes of geographical and political emphasis. It is argued that despite the paucity of textual data, the 4th Dynasty represents the apogee of Egypt's engagement in the region, a time when the centralised state was at the height of its power and control of human and economic capital. More broadly, this study shows that Egyptian interaction in the eastern Mediterranean fits the pattern of state-to-state contact between ruling elites, which was underpinned by official expeditions engaged in gift and commodity exchange, diplomatic endeavours, and military incursions.

Identifying the Stones of Classical Hebrew Ephraim S. Ayil, 2024-08-26. Since the translation of the Septuagint in the 3rd century BCE, scholars have attempted to identify the stones that populate the biblical text. This study rejects the long-standing reliance on ancient translations for identifying biblical stones. Despite the evident contradictions and historical inconsistencies, scholars traditionally presumed these translations to be reliable. By departing from this approach, this volume presents a novel synthesis of comparative linguistics and archaeogemological data. Through rigorous analysis of valid cognates, it establishes correlations between Hebrew stone names and their counterparts in ancient languages corresponding to known mineral species. This methodological shift enables a more accurate identification of stones mentioned in biblical texts, thus recovering their true historical context. The research not only advances our understanding of biblical mineralogy but also provides a fresh perspective on the material culture of the Ancient Levant, offering valuable insights for scholars and laymen linguists.

McKenzie, 2009-01-01 While for many the old and destructive controversy as to whether the Bible is to be taken literally has long since been resolved modern research and scholarship has progressed far beyond this debate The point of the research has not been to destroy the credibility of the Bible but rather to understand Scripture better In the process many popular and traditional certainties have fallen by the wayside Scholars doubt that Moses led the Israelites across the Red Sea or into the Sinai that David is the author of the Psalms or indeed that Solomon was even wise These and dozens of other illusions are being stripped away and more will surely follow Beyond this there are the larger contradictions which exist between the law and spirit of the Old and New Testaments The modern believer needs both to know of these findings and put them into a perspective which will enhance rather than diminish understanding of the Scriptures Overturing Certainties in Near Eastern Archaeology Çiğdem Maner, Mara T. Fleming, 2000-06-30 The recent large scale watershed projects in northern Syria where the ancient city of Emar was located have brought this area to light thanks to salvage operation excavations before the area was submerged Excavations at Meskenah Qadimeh on the great bend of the Euphrates River revealed this large town which had been built in the late 14th century and then destroyed violently at the beginning of the 12th at the end of the Bronze Age In the town of Emar ritual tablets were discovered in a temple that are demonstrated to have been recorded by the supervisor of the local cult who was called the diviner This religious leader also operated a significant writing center which focused on both administering local ritual and fostering competence in Mesopotamian lore An archaic local calendar can be distinguished from other calendars in use at Emar both foreign and local A second overlapping calendar emanated from the palace and represented a rising political force in some tension with rooted local institutions The archaic local calendar can be partially reconstructed from one ritual text that outlines the rites performed during a period of six months The main public rite of Emar s religious calendar was the zukru festival This event was celebrated in a simplified annual ritual and in a more elaborate version of the ritual for seven days during every seventh year probably serving as a pledge of loyalty to the chief god Dagan The Emar ritual calendar was native in spite of various levels of outside influence and thus offers important evidence for ancient Syrian culture These texts are thus important for ancient Near Eastern cultic and ritual studies Fleming's comprehensive study lays the basic groundwork for all future study of the ritual and makes a major contribution to the study of ancient Syria
