Talking about Films Chidananda Das Gupta, 1981 Global Undergrounds Carlos López Galviz, Paul Dobraszczyk, Bradley L. Garrett, 2016-06-15 Rest your eyes long enough on the skylines of Delhi Guangzhou Jakarta even Chicago or London and you will see the same remarkable transformation building after building going up with the breakneck speed of twenty first century urbanization But there is something else just as transformative that you won't see sprawling networks of tunnels rooting these cities into the earth Global Undergrounds offers a richly illustrated exploration of these subterranean spaces charting their global reach and the profound but often unseen effects they have on human life The authors shine their headlamps into an astonishing diversity of manmade underground environments including subway systems sewers communications pipelines storage facilities and even shelters There they find not only an extraordinary range of architectural approaches to underground construction but also a host of different cultural meanings Underground places can evoke fear or hope they can serve as sites of memory places of work or the hidden headquarters of resistance movements They are places that can tell a city's oldest stories or foresee its most distant futures They are places ultimately of both incredible depth and breadth crucial to all of us topside who work as urban planners geographers architects engineers or any

Transition Cinema Jessica L. Stites Mor,2012-05-27 In Transition Cinema Jessica Stites Mor documents the critical role filmmakers the film industry and state regulators played in Argentina s volatile and unfinished transition from dictatorship to democracy She shows how during periods of both military repression and civilian rule the state moved to control political film production and its content distribution and exhibition She also reveals the strategies that the industry independent filmmakers and film activists employed to comply with or circumvent these regulations Stites Mor traces three distinct generations of transition cinema each defined by a seminal event that shifted the political economy of national filmmaking The first generation of filmmakers witnessed and participated in civil uprisings such as the Cordobazo in 1969 and faced waves of repression violence and censorship This generation gave rise to vibrant underground exhibitions and film clubs and eventually became symbolically linked to the Peronist Left and radical militancy Following the 1983 return to civilian rule a second generation of political filmmakers emerged at the center of public debates when Buenos Aires became the locus for state level cultural programs to address human rights and collective memory Building on that legacy a third generation of filmmakers explored new modes of activist and political filmmaking aided by digital technology They pioneered new genres such as the street phenomenon of cine piquetero and introduced resistance politics and social movements into highly visible public spaces In this captivating work Stites Mor examines how social movements political actors filmmakers and government and industry institutions all became deeply enmeshed in the project of Argentina s transition cinema She demonstrates how film emerged as the chronicler of political struggles in a dialogue with the past present and future whose message transcended both cultural and national borders
