Talking Shop Peter Betjemann, 2011-09-12 Describing everything from bread and cappuccinos to mass market furnishings a language of the artisanal saturates our culture today That language Peter Betjemann proposes has a rich and specifiable history Between 1840 and 1920 the cultural appetite for handmade chairs tables cabinets and other material odds and ends flowed through narrative and texts as much as through dusty workshops or the physical surfaces of clay wood or metal Judged by classic axioms about labor's virtue axioms originating with Plato and foundational to modern theories of workmanship the vigorous life of craft as represented in these texts might seem a secondhand version of an ideal and purposeful activity But Talking Shop celebrates these texts as a cultural phenomenon of their own In the first book to consider the literary representation of craft rather than of labor in general Peter Betjemann asks how nineteenth and early twentieth century craftspeople writers and consumers managed craft's traditional attachment to physical objects and activities while also celebrating craft in iconic emblematic preeminently textual terms The durable model of workmanship that was created around correlations of craft and narrative physical process and representation and body and text blurred the boundaries between craft and its consumption Discussing a wide range of material from fiction and essays to artifacts the book explores how the era paved the way for the vitality and the viability of a language of craft in much later decades
