Muslim faith are studied with a view to discovering what parents expect from their children's school and how the teachers perceive their own role with regard to their students. These young people are the first generation of Asians to be educated in Britain. Their location in terms of their social class positions, gender and ethnicity are inextricably bound together. About The Boys Lynn Maddern, 2014-07-18

At a time of unprecedented international immigration, seven Somali and African Caribbean boys are working their way through primary and secondary education. It is inner city Bristol and like large cities across the UK, local communities and schools are receiving many thousands of Somali refugees on their doorstep. As new priorities are swiftly established in the staff room, a new pecking order develops in the playground. In an attempt to improve relations between rival groups, seven boys are referred into a Year 6 social skills group run by the author. Five years later, she meets the boys again and at home with their mothers, grandmothers and siblings, hears stories of exclusion and disappointment, success and ambition as they progress towards their GCSE examinations. Drawn from the author's doctoral research, this engaging and emotionally honest book offers gripping stories from young people who live at the leading edge of demographic change, a critical discourse on the underachievement of Black and Somali children, a detailed account of the use of a performance narrative methodology and an exploration of the author's positioning as a White researcher working with Black participants. About the Boys is vital reading for those interested in the attainment of Black and Somali children and in schools and communities coping with demographic change. It is of particular relevance to students and researchers of narrative inquiry.

International Handbook of Migration, Minorities and Education Zvi Bekerman, Thomas Geisen, 2011-10-06

Migrants and minorities are always at risk of being caught in essentialized cultural definitions and being denied the right to express their cultural preferences because they are perceived as threats to social cohesion. Migrants and minorities respond to these difficulties in multiple ways as active agents in the pedagogical, political, social and scientific processes that position them in this or that cultural sphere. On the one hand, they reject ascribed cultural attributes while striving towards integration in a variety of social spheres, e.g. school and workplace, in order to achieve social mobility. On the other hand, they articulate demands for cultural self-determination. This discursive duality is met with suspicion by the majority culture. For societies with high levels of migration or with substantial minority cultures, questions related to the meaning of cultural heterogeneity and the social and cultural limits of learning and communication, e.g. migration education or critical multiculturalism, are very important. It is precisely here where the chances for new beginnings and new trials become of great importance for educational theorizing, which urgently needs to find answers to current questions about individual freedom, community, cultural affiliations and social and democratic cohesion. Answers to these questions must account for both political and learning perspectives at the macro, mezzo and micro contextual levels. The contributions of this edited volume enhance the knowledge in the field of migrant minority education.

with a special emphasis on the meaning of culture and social learning for educational processes Essays on Secularism and Multiculturalism Tariq Modood,2019-04-25 Whether the recently settled religious minorities Muslims in particular can be accommodated as religious groups in European countries has become a central political question and threatens to create long term fault lines In this collection of essays Tariq Modood argues that to grasp the nature of the problem we have to see how Muslims have become a target of a cultural racism Islamophobia Yet the problem is not just one of anti racism but of an understanding of multicultural citizenship of how minority identities including those formed by race ethnicity and religion can be incorporated into national identities so all can have a sense of belonging together This means that the tendency amongst some to exclude religious identities from public institutions and the re making of national identities has to be challenged Modood suggests that this can be done in a principled yet pragmatic way by drawing on Western Europe s moderate political secularism and eschewing forms of secularism that offer religious groups a second class citizenship
