Whose Development An Ethnography Of Aid:

Whose Development? Emma Crewe, Elizabeth Harrison, 1998-12 This book is an ethnography of development in practice It builds on recent work in the anthropology of development in its examination of the evolution and persistence of a number of key ideas about gender technology and race It explores how these are rooted in both material practices and ideologies notably the Enlightenment and colonialism but goes beyond previous studies which have tended to focus mainly on the apparently monolithic power of the developers The authors argue for a more nuanced account of power through analysis of the relationship between individual agency and structural constraint Their fascinating study shows how a simple dichotomy between us the developers and them the victims of development misconstrues the nature of the processes involved

Gender and Natural Resource Management Bernadette P. Resurrección, Rebecca Elmhirst, 2012-05-31 This book is about the gender dimensions of natural resource exploitation and management with a focus on Asia It explores the uneasy negotiations between theory policy and practice that are often evident within the realm of gender environment and natural resource management especially where gender is understood as a political negotiated and contested element of social relationships It offers a critical feminist perspective on gender relations and natural resource management in the context of contemporary policy concerns decentralized governance the elimination of poverty and themainstreaming of gender Through a combination of strong conceptual argument and empirical material from a variety of political economic and ecological contexts including Cambodia China Indonesia Malaysia Nepal Thailand and Vietnam the book examines gender environment linkages within shifting configurations of resource access and control The book will serve as a core resource for students of gender studies and natural resource management and as supplementary reading for a wide range of disciplines including geography environmental studies sociology and development It also provides a stimulating collection of ideas for professionals looking to incorporate gender issues within their practice in sustainable development Published with IDRC Transformative Sustainable Development Kei Otsuki, 2014-12-05 Recent debates about sustainable development have shifted their focus from fixing environmental problems in a technocratic and economic way to more fundamental changes in social political processes and relations In this context participation is a genuinely transformative approach to sustainable development yet the process by which participation leads to transformation is not sufficiently understood This book considers how the act of participating in sustainable development projects can bring about social transformation that is considered to be fair and just by the participants and non participants in a broader societal context Drawing on ideas from social theory and applied anthropology the book proposes a reflexivity based framework to analyse participation as a type of social action underpinned by primary experience Development projects have a transformative effect when participants are given the opportunity to reflect on their experience share the reflection with others and open new space for collective deliberation and change The book applies this framework to assess community based participatory projects in the Amazon African slums and rural settlements and disaster stricken areas in Japan It also outlines potential institutions of governance to institutionalize the change by referring to current food governance drawing out lessons with international relevance This book will be of interest to students of sustainable development environmental policy and development studies as well as practitioners and policy makers in these fields

Sustainable Development in Amazonia Kei Otsuki,2013 This book questions the assumption that Amazonia s future rests exclusively in sustainability and environmental conservation It is the first book to argue for an Amazonia strategy that emphasises societal dynamics in deforestation and sustainable development policy Demystifying utopian views of the rainforest as a troubled paradise the book explores potential processes by which ordinary settlers can themselves construct a sustainable society

Participating in Development Alan Bicker,Johan Pottier,Paul Sillitoe,2003-12-16 Development has too often failed to deliver on its promises to poor nations The policies imposed from above by international agencies and state bodies have frequently not met the needs and aspirations of ordinary people Development agencies have been searching for sometime for alternative approaches One of those being pioneered is indigenous knowledge which aims to make local voices heard more effectively However while it is increasingly acknowledged in development contexts it is yet to be validated and accepted by anthropologists It is self evident to any anthropologist that effective development assistance will benefit from some understanding of local knowledge and practices This therefore puts anthropology and anthropologists at the centre of development This volume focuses on two major issues that anthropology might profitably address First of all how to define indigenous knowledge and who should define it as it currently lacks disciplinary coherence Secondly once this definition is achieved what methodologies should be used in such an interdisciplinary research endeavour when it must meet the demands of development cost and time effective intelligible to non experts while not compromising anthropological expectations The new opportunities and their methodological implications are addressed in the chapters of this book in a range of ethnographic and institutional contexts and demonstrate how wide reaching and how crucially important this debate has become Participating in Development is a thought provoking and challenge collection Its authors both define and validate the role of the anthropologist in development as well of development in anthropology Rethinking Development in South Asia Farid Uddin Ahamed,M. Saiful Islam,Amir Mohammad Nasrullah,2022-03-17 This book challenges the way development has been conceptualized and practiced in South Asian context and argues for its deconstruction in a way that would allow freedom choice and greater well being for the local people Far from taking development for granted as growth and advancement this book unveils how development could also be a destructive force to local socio cultural and environmental contexts With a critical examination of such conventional development practices as hegemonic patriarchal devastating and failure it highlights how the rethinking of development could be seen as a matter of practice by incorporating people s interest priorities and participation The book theoretically challenges the conventional notion of hegemonic development and proposes alternative means and practically provides nuances of ethnographic knowledge which will be of great interest to policy planners development practitioners educationists and anyone interested in knowing more about how people think about their own development

Maclean, 2015-02-07 This book highlights the importance of diversity in overcoming issues of social and environmental degradation It presents conceptual and practical strategies to celebrate local and Indigenous knowledge for improved community development and environmental management David Harvey has proclaimed The geography we make must be a peoples geography This clarion call challenges geographers around the world to consider the power and potential of geographic knowledge as the basis for social action a call this book answers providing readers the theoretical and conceptual tools needed to understand the social world and empowering them to mobilize social change The author uses empirical case studies of two environmental management and community development projects to document how knowledge generation is essentially locally situated and socially derived In doing so she charts a path for moving beyond what Vandana Shiva so aptly describes as monocultures of the mind The book argues that local and Indigenous knowledge must not be seen in opposition to scientific knowledge as none of these knowledge traditions hold all the answers to localized socio environmental problems

Rather as the author explores through a set of processes and strategies to enable support and celebrate cultural hybridity at the local environmental governance scale these respective knowledge systems can learn to speak to each other Such dialogue has the potential to support more sustainable outcomes at multiple environmental governance locales This book will be of interest to everyone involved in environmental policy planning or politics and for those who want to make this planet a more sustainable and just place

The Anti-Politics Machine Julie Jenkins, 2017-07-05 James Ferguson's 1990 study The Anti-Politics Machine was a radical intervention in development studies that remains influential in the field today It is also an excellent example of the way in which creative thinking can help shake up an idea and show problems in a new light Ferguson's interest was development strategies in the Third World the interventions by which aid agencies NGOs and individual countries try to raise poor areas or countries economic and living standards Embedded in the community in Lesotho a small country in southern Africa Ferguson noted that time and time again the same strategies were used by agencies and foreign powers despite the fact that they had failed many times before Seeking to analyse the implications of this discovery Ferguson made a move that is often employed by creative thinkers he stepped outside of the standard interpretative framework and applied a novel way of interpreting the problem In this case Ferguson imported his framework and methodology from the French philosopher and historian Michel Foucault whose theories of power dynamics enabled Ferguson to see the failed development strategies from an entirely new perspective It is a simple but impactful move that helped revolutionise the discussion Page 5

Bargaining in the Development Market-place Elizabeth Pilar Challinor, 2008 The process of ethnographically detailing how individuals encounter institutions is a complicated task Few are those accounts that manage to clearly elucidate how new institutional knowledge passes through individuals within the course of normative everyday living Elizabeth Challinor's ethnography of rural Santiago Cape Verde does an outstanding job of revealing how the introduction of new institutional procedures are felt and experienced in non suspecting places in non suspecting ways and with non suspecting outcomes Challinor's descriptions of the encounter between new policies and daily practice provide an important lesson on the power in ethnographically informed theorization
