Courier poems (sandeha- or duta-kavya) arguably constitute the most productive literary genre in the history of South Asia. Patterned in part after Kālidāsa's masterpiece, The Mission of a Cloud (Meghadūta), such poems usually posit a pair of separated lovers, one of whom sends an unlikely envoy—for example a cloud, a goose, the wind, the Tamil language, or a bat—with a message to the faraway beloved. Normally, the courier is assigned a route that is described in the first half of the poem, while the second half imagines him (it) delivering the message. Over centuries, Sanskrit poets produced a huge corpus of such works, as did writers in many regional languages, whose poems display particular regional and language-specific features.

The Sanskrit Summer Academy on Courier Poems (2013) is meant to document the contours of this vast, cross-linguistic genre and explain its unparalleled popularity. Following on earlier work by Bronner and Shulman and two workshops organized by Charles Hallisey (Madison 2011 and Colombo 2012), we wish to study several major Courier Poems, to define the primary features of the genre, and to situate it in the historical continuum where it belongs.

The Summer Academy will take place at the Israel Institute for Advanced Studies, Feldman Building, Edmond J. Safra Campus, Givat Ram, Jerusalem. For more details see www.as.huji.ac.il/sanskrit\_III

The Poetic Courier Geneta Brown Turner,2014-12-04 After my sister died I tried to write poems to ease the pain As I wrote these poems I felt whole again It was a way to ease my mind Knowing that my sister was saved and gave her life to Christ before she died it made it easier to cope with because I know she s in a better place These poems were written with joy and a whole lot of pain but I know I will see her once again Losing loved ones is a lot of grief but if we stick to our beliefs we can go through all trials and tribulations These poems are a tribute to life s beginning and ending and life s many celebrations From the Poetry of Sumer Samuel Noah Kramer,2023-11-15 This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1979
