Catalog of Copyright Entries Library of Congress. Copyright Office, 1975    British Museum Catalogue of printed Books, 1881    A Dictionary of the English Language Robert Gordon Latham, 1866    Contemporary East European Poetry Emery Edward George, 1993 An anthology featuring 160 poets writing in 15 languages By the standards of Western Europe the subjects are heavy on social and political issues which only reflects the difference between the two Europes    A Dictionary of the English Language Samuel Johnson, 1882    The Translation of Religious Texts in the Middle Ages Domenico Pezzini, 2008 The transition from Latin to vernacular languages in the late Middle Ages and the dramatic rise of a new readership produced a huge bulk of translations particularly of religious literature in its various genres The solutions are so multifarious that they defy any attempt to outline general theories This is particularly visible when the same text is translated or rewritten at different times and in different languages or genres Through a minute analysis of texts this book aims at highlighting lexical syntactic and stylistic choices dictated not only by the source but also by new readers and patrons or by new destinations of the works Established categories such as literalness and fidelity are thus questioned and integrated with these other factors which while being more external do nonetheless impinge on the very idea of translation and consequently on its assessment Far from being a mere transfer from one language to another a medieval translation verges on a form of creative writing and as such its study becomes a fascinating investigation into the very process of textual production    English Church Furniture, Ornaments and Decorations, at the period of the Reformation. practice Jonathan Woolley argues that common sense as a concept is rooted in English experiences of landscape and land management and examines it ethnographically unveiling common sense as key to understanding how British nature and public life are transforming in the present day Common sense encourages English people to tacitly assume that the management of land and other resources should organically converge on a consensus that yields self evident practical results Furthermore the English then tend to assume that their own position reflects that consensus Other stakeholders are not seen as having legitimate but distinct expertise and interests but are rather viewed as being stupid and or immoral for ignoring self evident pragmatic truths Compromise is therefore less likely and land management practices become entrenched and resistant to innovation and improvement Through a detailed ethnographic study of the Norfolk Broads this book explores how environmental policy and land management in rural areas could be more effective if a truly common sense was restored in the way we manage our shared environment Using academic and lay deployments of common sense as a route into the political economy of rural environments this book will be of great interest to scholars and students of socio cultural anthropology sociology human geography cultural studies social history and the environmental humanities
