Thinking Through Cultures Richard A. Shweder,1991 A discipline is emerging called cultural psychology it will serve as a force of renewal for both anthropology and psychology In this book Richard Shweder presents its manifesto Its central theme is that we have to understand the way persons cultures and natures make each other up Its goal is to seek the mind indissociably embedded in the meanings and resonances that are both its product and its components Over the past thirty years the person as a category has disappeared from ethnography Shweder aims to reverse this trend focusing on the search for meaning and the creation of intentional worlds He examines the prospect for a reconciliation of rationality and relativism and defines an intellectual agenda for cultural psychology What Shweder calls for is an exploration of the human mind and of one's own mind by thinking through the ideas and practices of other peoples and their cultures He examines evidence of cross cultural similarities and differences in mind self emotion and morality with special reference to the cultural psychology of a traditional Hindu temple town in India where he has done considerable work in comparative anthropology And he critiques the concept of the person implicit in Western social science as well as psychiatric theories of the subject He maintains that it will come as no surprise to cultural psychology if it should turn out that there are different psychological generalizations or nomological networks a Hindu psychology a Protestant psychology appropriate for the different semiotic regions of the world Shweder brings the news that God is alive not dead but that there are many gods

Futures Thinking

Christian Dayé, 2025-07-22 This book starts from the assumption that futures thinking is difficult yet of existential necessity We live in times where the future of humanity is at stake Thus it is important to understand where the images of the future that currently circulate in our cultures and societies come from This book is about two fields in the social sciences that explicitly concentrate on futures studies and the sociology of the future Informed by sociological theories it applies bibliometric methods to describe these two fields as epistemic tribes and territories After reflecting on the historical reasons for this bipartite academic institutionalization the book explores how the two fields could achieve a diligent division of labor that encourages forms of futures thinking that speak to the societal and civilizational needs of our times

Constructing

Social Problems Malcolm Spector, There is no adequate definition of social problems within sociology and there is not and never has been a sociology of social problems That observation is the point of departure of this book The authors aim to provide such a definition and to prepare the ground for the empirical study of social problems They are aware that their objective will strike many fellow sociologists as ambitious perhaps even arrogant Their work challenges sociologists who have over a period of fifty years written treatises on social problems produced textbooks cataloguing the nature distribution and causes of these problems and taught many sociology courses It is only natural that the authors work will be viewed as controversial in light of the large literature which has established a sociology of a wide range of social problems the sociology of race relations prostitution poverty crime mental illness and so forth In the 1970s when the authors were preparing for a seminar on the sociology of social problems their review of the literature revealed the absence of any systematic coherent statement of theory or method in the study of social problems For many years the subject was listed and offered by university departments of sociology as a service course to present undergraduates with what they should know about the various social pathologies that exist in their society This conception of social problems for several decades has been reflected in the substance and quality of the literature dominated by textbooks In Constructing Social Problems the authors propose that social problems be conceived as the claims making activities of individuals or groups regarding social conditions they consider unjust immoral or harmful and that should be addressed This perspective as the authors have formulated it conceives of social problems as a process of interaction that produces social problems as social facts in society The authors further propose that this process and the social facts it produces are the data to be researched for the sociology of social problems This volume will be of interest to those concerned with the discipline of sociology especially its current theoretical development and growth Malcolm Spector was professor of sociology at McGill University in Montreal Canada John I Kitsuse is professor emeritus at the University of California at Santa Cruz He is co author with Leonard Broom of The Managed Casualty The Japanese American Family in World War II and co editor with Theodore R Sarbin of Constructing the Social
