AND A CROW

A LION AND A RABBIT

THE ART OF D

Once a lion said to all the animals in the forest that if one of them will come to him as his meal for the day, he would not kill anyone else among them. All the animals agreed to this.

One day, it was a rabbit's turn and it took quite long reaching the lion. The lion asked it the reason for being late. It acted wisely and said, "Sir! I was stopped by another lion, who was claiming to be the king of the jungle and he wants to meet you." "So do I", said the furious lion.

The rabbit took the lion to a well and showed him his reflection in the water of the well. The lion jumped into the well to catch his opponent and drowned.

How intelligently, the rabbit got rid of the wild beast.

Some of the essays in this book notably those concerned with examining Western influences on sub-Saharan African writings tracing Shakespearean and Brechtian echoes in Nigerian drama for instance or following the footprints of Sherlock Holmes in Swahili detective fiction fit the traditional definition of comparative literature. These are essays that cross national literary boundaries and sometimes transcend language barriers as well. They look for correspondences in related literary phenomena from widely dispersed areas of the globe bringing together what is akin from what is akimbo. But most of the essays included here involve closer comparisons. Two focus on works produced in different languages within the same African nation Yoruba and English in Nigeria Afrikaans and English in South Africa and one presents a taxonomy of dominant literary forms in English in three East African nations. Others concentrate on the oeuvre of a single author and on the likely future output of exiled writers who soon will be returning home. One essay contrasts discursive tendencies within the same text and another investigates conflicting African and Western religious beliefs. A great variety of comparative methodologies is deployed here not all of these are transnational multilingual or pluralistic in scope. The last two groups of essays deal with matters of characterization and authorial reputation. Studies of the depiction of African Americans politicians and women in a wide range of African literary texts are followed by an assessment of the current standing of anglophone Africa's leading authors. In entering such highly contested terrain the comparatist approach adopted has been that of the neutral witness to early African attempts comparatist in their own way to define an African canon of classic texts. Authors discussed include Ama Ata Aidoo Ghana Chinua Achebe John Pepper Clark Cyprian Ekwensi D O Fagunwa Wole Soyinka and Amos Tutuola Nigeria Peter Abrahams J M Coetzee Nadine Gordimer Alex La Guma Thomas Mofolo Es'kia Mphahlele and Karel Schoeman South Africa. The Best Novels of the Nineties Linda Parent Leshner, 2015-11-17.
