Combining both quantitative and qualitative research and contributions from industry experts in sports reporting across Europe, America, and Australia, the collection offers a valuable look at the digital sports reporting industry today. Issues discussed in the text include the ethical questions created by social media abuse received by sports journalists; the impact of social media on narratives about gender and race; and the silencing of journalists over the issue of trans athletes, as well as the impact on traditional aspects of sports journalism such as the match report. The book features first-hand accounts from leading sports reporters and scholars about how these changes have affected the industry and sets out what best practice looks like in this field today. This book will be a useful resource for scholars and students working in the fields of journalism, media, sports, and communication, as well as for current sports journalism practitioners interested in the future of a changing industry. Changing Sports Journalism Practice in the Age of Digital Media Raymond Boyle, 2020-06-09 As the funding of journalism moves centre stage as a driver in shaping the new trajectories of journalism in the digital age, this book focuses on how those working in sports journalism have had to adapt and re-invent themselves. Running through this international collection are key themes related to sports journalism in the digital environment. These include aspects of disruption to established norms of journalistic practice; institutional allegiance; the authority and primary defining role of journalism; and the career structure and development for journalists writing about sport. The book draws on empirically led research that mixes qualitative and quantitative approaches and seeks to better understand and position what is going on across contemporary sports journalism. In so doing, this collection identifies change but also areas of continuity, as well as new opportunities for journalists. This book was originally published as a special issue of Digital Journalism. Sports
