C. Fung, 2013-06-29 The motivation for writing a series of books on biomechanics is to bring this rapidly developing subject to students of bioengineering physiology and mechanics In the last decade biomechanics has become a recognized discipline offered in virtually all universities Yet there is no adequate textbook for instruction neither is there a treatise with sufficiently broad coverage A few books bearing the title of biomechanics are too elementary others are too specialized I have long felt a need for a set of books that will inform students of the physiological and medical applications of biomechanics and at the same time develop their training in mechanics We cannot assume that all students come to biomechanics already fully trained in fluid and solid mechanics their knowledge in these subjects has to be developed as the course proceeds The scheme adopted in the present series is as follows First some basic training in mechanics to a level about equivalent to the first seven chapters of the author's A First Course in Continuum Mechanics Prentice Hall Inc 1977 is assumed We then present some essential parts of biomechanics from the point of view of bioengineering physiology and medical applications In the meantime mechanics is developed through a sequence of problems and examples The main text reads like physiology while the exercises are planned like a mechanics textbook The instructor may fill a dual role teaching an essential branch of life science and gradually developing the student's knowledge in mechanics

Manser,Nigel D. Turton,1987      Excavations at Northton, Isle of Harris Derek Douglas Alexander Simpson,Eileen M. Murphy,Richard A. Gregory,2006 This volume presents the site of Northton in the Western Isles of Scotland at Toe Head on Harris During excavations in 1965 and 1966 two early horizons were identified beneath and close to the base of the machair sands With excavation the stratigraphically later of these horizons furnished evidence for a probable stone structure funerary and faunal remains and an abundance of artefacts particularly pottery which in turn dated the horizon to the Neolithic period In contrast the lower horizon lay directly above the natural boulder clay was sealed by the machair sands and contained a general paucity of faunal and artefactual remains Due to the discovery of one small sherd of Neolithic pottery it was assumed however that this horizon might represent an earlier phase of Neolithic occupation During a brief season of fieldwork in 2001 a seemingly comparable horizon which also rested above the boulder clay was identified in a section which had been exposed through coastal erosion Following a limited investigation this basal horizon produced evidence for human activity in the form of possible stone settings charred plant macrofossils faunal remains and a small assemblage of chipped stone artefacts Significantly a series of dates obtained from the plant macrofossils indicate that this material is unambiguously of the

Mesolithic period Whilst these somewhat unexpected results have major implications for constructing the internal chronology of the site as they appear to extend human activity at Northton back to the seventh millennium cal BC they are also of considerable interest at both a regional and national level as they may represent the first direct evidence for Mesolithic activity in the Western Isles The volume has chapters on the site s early occupation the Beaker period Bronze Iron and later periods and a history of the Northton Machair There are six Appendices and Catalogues of finds and data
