

addition, Turabian Style uses superscripted numbers; that is, they are placed slightly above and after the quoted sentence.

Since the exact words of another author have been used in the quote in the previous paragraph, this must be acknowledged by using quotation marks and a footnote. Note at the foot of this page, the footnote that reflects this quotation. The font size for footnotes can be 12 or 10-pt (10-pt is preferred) and the type is Times New Roman, the same as the body of the paper.

Quotes that are less than five lines remain as prose within the paragraph. However, if a quote is five lines or longer, include it as an indented block quotation:

Introduce the quotation in your own words in the text. . . . If you introduce the quotation with a complete sentence, end the sentence with a colon. If you use only an attribution phrase such as notes, claims, argues, or according to along with the author's name, end the phrase with a comma. If you weave the quotation into the syntax of your sentence, do not use any punctuation before the quotation if no punctuation would ordinarily appear there. Single-space a block quotation, and leave a blank line before and after it. Do not add quotation marks at the beginning or end, but preserve any quotation marks in the original. Indent the entire quotation as far as you indent the first line of a paragraph.³

The “. . .” in the quotation used are called ellipses and are used to indicate deliberate omissions of words from a direct quote. Quotation marks are not used in block quotes.

The first time a source is cited, give the full citation in the footnote. Each entry begins with the author's first name first, followed by last name. For subsequent citations of the same source, the abbreviated version can be used, which simply consists of the author's last name, an abbreviated title of the work (unless the title is already short), and the page number for the reference. The Turabian Style Guide explains, “When references to the same work follow each other without any intervening reference . . . the abbreviation “Ibid.” is used.”⁴ Look at footnote 3 and compare with footnote 2 at the bottom of this page. Number 3 is from the same book, but Disseminating Behavioral Research Annette K. Griffith, Tyler C. Ré, 2023-12-09 Dissemination is a key component of the research process While several fields have developed resources dedicated to training and supporting their scientists and practitioners as they are encouraged to disseminate within their fields and to the larger public audience there has been a lack of formal guidance for dissemination within the behavioral sciences Disseminating Behavioral Science aims to fill that gap providing guidance across modalities for topics ranging from the peer review process to conference presentation to nontraditional avenues for dissemination The contents of this edited text divided across six sections serves as a roadmap for students junior researchers and senior scholars The first section includes types of academic scholarship types of dissemination and strategies to ensure ethical dissemination The second reviews traditional publication preparation including tips for the writing process and key components to include in each section of a scientific manuscript Section Three explores publication within a traditional peer reviewed journal Section Four outlines additional strategies to get research publicly recognized through conference presentations social media and popular media sources and white and grey literature Sections Five and Six offer a consolidated glossary of all key terms in the text and combined reference list
