

Extended Essay Skeleton Outline Template

Note – this is a generic template and may need to be adjusted for your particular topic

Introduction (usually written last):

- You will be able to write an introduction if you can make the following statements/claims about your paper:
 - Why the topic is interesting, important or worthy of study

 - Some background information to put your topic in context (why is it personally significant?)

 - Indication of how your topic has been focused on something that is manageable within 4000 words.

 - A clear and precise research question (it may change slightly throughout the draft stage):

 - A clear concluding thesis statement and argument (response to the research question. It also may change slightly)

Body:

- It is here where you will craft and support your argument. For the EE, you may decide to divide the paper into multiple parts or sections.
- Each part should have a clear focus; each paragraph within each part should have a purpose, make a point, and be supported by research.
- For your outline you should be able to:
 - Distinguish the order in which you will make your argument:
 - Part One: _____
 - Part Two: _____
 - Part Three: _____
 - Part Four: _____

Part One will likely be methodology and justification for the approach you've taken for your research (ie – sources, data collection etc...)

Part Two/Three/Four will present your case, support it with data/research and will present counter-arguments and refute them.
