Stevens, 2017-07-05 Public discussion of global healthcare issues is dominated by those who believe that top down government driven interventions are the solution to the myriad health problems suffered by people in less developed countries This thinking is responsible for a plethora of harmful policies ranging from a drive towards socialized healthcare systems to calls for the centralization and semi nationalization of pharmaceutical research and development to impractical but grandiose UN sponsored schemes for tackling HIV AIDS and malaria In spite of the abysmal track record of top down approaches non governmental organizations and UN agencies continue to promote them to the detriment of the private sector economic development and human health The resulting politicization of diseases such as HIV AIDS has led to a diversion of resources away from more easily treatable diseases that affect more people Meanwhile cost effective and simple interventions such as vaccination are being subordinated to other more politically correct diseases This centralizing mindset

has also resulted in many governments in less developed countries attempting to plan and control universal healthcare systems which has encouraged rationing inequitable access and entrenched corruption It has also seriously undermined the effectiveness of overseas development aid Moreover the politicization of diseases such as HIV AIDS has led to a diversion of resources away from more easily treatable diseases that affect more people As a result cost effective and simple interventions are neglected by donors There has to date been little public discussion of the role of markets and their underlying institutions property rights and the rule of law in improving human health Economic growth and globalization has led to unprecedented improvements in human health The challenge is to enable the poorest countries to take part more fully in this process This work demonstrates how current

Promoting Cardiovascular Health in the Developing World Institute of Medicine, Board on Global Health, Committee on Preventing the Global Epidemic of Cardiovascular Disease: Meeting the Challenges in Developing Countries, 2010-06-29 Cardiovascular disease CVD once thought to be confined primarily to industrialized nations has emerged as a major health threat in developing countries Cardiovascular disease now accounts for nearly 30 percent of deaths in low and middle income countries each year and is accompanied by significant economic repercussions Yet most governments global health institutions and development agencies have largely overlooked CVD as they have invested in health in developing countries Recognizing the gap between the compelling evidence of the global CVD burden and the investment needed to prevent and control CVD the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute NHLBI turned to the IOM for advice on how to catalyze change In this report the IOM recommends that the NHLBI development agencies nongovernmental organizations and governments work toward two essential goals creating environments that promote heart healthy lifestyle choices and help reduce the risk of chronic diseases and building public health infrastructure and health systems with the capacity to implement programs that will effectively detect and reduce risk and manage CVD To meet these goals the IOM recommends several steps including improving cooperation and collaboration implementing effective and feasible strategies and informing efforts through research and health surveillance Without better efforts to promote cardiovascular health global health as a whole will be undermined
