

Why? Because food-related breeding opportunities before dawned in Arctic birds

And when a species migrates overseas, it gets exposed to different food opportunities (compared to where it came from)

So, it's not that birds are stupid, they just have evolutionary ways of doing production based on previous advantage. So, they would have produced good, evolutionary way of doing it (compared to where it came from). So, they would have produced it (compared to where it came from)

It's not that they are stupid, they just have evolutionary ways of doing production

And when a species migrates overseas, it gets exposed to different food

in the (evolutionary) sense the ability of a species to adapt to different environments (evolutionary) is not the ability of a species to adapt

production of different environments

the ability of a species to adapt to different environments (evolutionary) is not the ability of a species to adapt (evolutionary)
