Botrychium Edward Joseph Lowe, 1867      Our Native Ferns and how to Study Them Lucien Marcus Underwood, 1890      Catalogues of Second-hand Books Henry Sotheran Ltd, 1877      A Catalogue of Valuable New and Second-hand Books Willis and Sotheran, 1877      Nature Notes, 1896      An English Squire Christabel Rose Coleridge, 1881      Publishers' Circular and General Record of British and Foreign Literature, and Booksellers' Record, 1867      Country Rambles, and Manchester Walks and Wild Flowers Leo Hartley Grindon, 2015-02-23 Example in this ebook The meanest floweret of the vale The simplest note that swells the gale The common sun the air the skies To him are opening Paradise Wide as may be the circle covered by a great town we come to the country at last Let the bricks and mortar stride far as they will over the greensward there are always sanctuaries beyond sweet spots where we may yet listen to the singing of the birds and pluck the early primrose and anemone We need but take our survey from a sufficiently high point to see that the vastest mass of houses ever heaped together by man is still only an encampment in the fields Like the waves of the sea upon the shores of the islands the surge of the yellow corn is still close upon our borders We need but turn our faces fondly towards rural things and rural sights and we shall find them Manchester itself grim flat smoky Manchester with its gigantic suburb ever on the roll further into the plain and scouts from its great army of masons posted on every spot available for hostile purposes Manchester itself denies to no one of its five hundred thousand who is blessed with health and strength the amenities and genial influences of the country True we have no grand scenery no Clyde no Ben Lomond no Leigh Woods no St Vincent s Rocks no Clevedon no Durdham Down our rivers are anything but limpid our mountains are far away upon the horizon our lakes owe less to nature than to art as for waterfalls we have none but in our portfolios Still is our town bosomed in beauty Though the magnificent and the romantic be wanting we have meadows trimmed with wild flowers the scent of the new mown hay and the purple clover we have many a sweet sylvan walk where we may hear The burnie

wimplin doon the glen and many a grateful pathway under the mingled boughs of beech and chestnut Next to a fine woman the most delightful object in creation is a noble and well grown tree a group of such trees always reminds us of a bevy of fair ladies and dull and unthankful must be the man who in the tranquil and sacred shades of Alderley and Dunham cannot realise to himself the most genuine and heartfelt pleasure that trees and woods can give If they be not so sumptuous as the oaks of Worcestershire or so stately as the elms of Surrey our trees are as leafy and as green and their shadows fall as softly on the summer afternoon The great secret in the enjoyment of nature as in our intercourse with society is to look at its objects in a friendly light to make the most of them such as they are not invidiously contrasting them with certain other objects at a distance but recognising that absolute and positive beauty which is possessed by the very humblest Superadd to this the habit of connecting our own feelings and emotions with the forms of nature and however wanting in attractions to the mere adulator of fine scenery every little flower every bend of the branches and sweet concurrent play of light and shade every pendent shadow in the stream becomes animated with a meaning and a power of satisfying such as none but those who accustom themselves to look for it here can find in the most favoured and spacious landscape Justly to appreciate the wonderful and rare we must first learn to regard with a tender and intimate affection the common and the unpretending in the degree that we withdraw from the latter treating it with indifference or contempt as surely does our capacity diminish for the former The common things of earth are the most gracious gifts of God None of us extract their full value yet every man holds it in his power to make himself tenfold happier by a wise use of them For true and continuous enjoyment of life is not attained by the gratification of high flown and artificial wants connected in large measure with the idea of pounds shillings and pence To be continue in this ebook      The Natural History and Scientific Book Circular ,1871      The Gardeners' Chronicle ,1874
