Wild Things Frederick W. F. Foulds, Helen C. Drinkall, Angela R. Perri, David T.G. Clinnick, James W.P. Walker, 2014-11-30 Recently Palaeolithic and Mesolithic archaeology has been breaking boundaries worldwide Finds such as the Mesolithic house at Howick the sequencing of the Neanderthal genome and the recently discovered footprints at Happisburgh all serve to indicate how archaeologists in these fields are truly at the cutting edge of understanding humanity's past This volume celebrates this trend by focusing on recent advances in the study of the Palaeolithic and Mesolithic. With contributors from a diverse range of backgrounds it allows for a greater degree of interdisciplinary discourse than is often the case as the Palaeolithic and Mesolithic are generally split apart. Wild Things brings together contributions from major researchers and early career specialists detailing research taking place across the British Isles, France, Portugal, Russia, the Levant and Europe as a whole, providing a cross section of the exciting range of research being conducted. By combining papers from both these periods it is hoped that dialogue between practitioners of Palaeolithic and Mesolithic archaeology can be further encouraged. Topics include the chronology of the Mid Upper Palaeolithic of Europe, Russia, territorial use of Alpine high altitude areas by Mesolithic hunter gatherers, discussing the feasibility of reconstructing Neanderthal demography to examine their extinction, the funerary contexts from the Mesolithic burials at Muge, the discovery of further British Upper Palaeolithic parietal art at Cathole Cave, exploitation of both lithics and fauna in Palaeolithic France and an analysis of Mesolithic Neolithic trade in Europe.

Wild Things Judy Attfield, 2020-08-20. What do things mean? What does the life of everyday objects reveal about people and their material worlds? Has the quest for the real thing become so important because the high tech world of total virtuality threatens to engulf us? This pioneering book bridges design theory and anthropology to offer a new and challenging way of understanding the changing meanings of contemporary human object relations. The act of consumption is only the starting point of object's lives. Thereafter they are transformed and invested with new meanings and associations that reflect and assert who we are. Defining designed things as things with attitude differentiates the highly visible fashionable object from ordinary artefacts that are too easily taken for granted. Through case studies ranging from reproduction furniture to fashion and textiles to clutter, the author traces the connection between objects and authenticity, ephemerality and self identity. Beyond this she shows the materiality of the everyday in terms of space, time and the body and suggests a transition with the passing of time.
