Admission Essay on Why I Want to Become A Nurse

As I was growing up I remember being afraid of doctor and nurses. I use to hate going to the doctors Iâ€™m pretty sure most children were afraid too. I remember so clearly that when the doctor had to give a shot I wouldnâ€™t let myself. I would start crying and start moving around. The nurses would hold me down and the doctor would give me a shot and after that I would be so mad with my mom for letting them give me a shot. The way I would act I can relate to â€œMary Ainsworthâ€, to her Ambivalent Attachment Pattern, is a style of attachment in which children display a combination of positive and negative reaction to their mothers: they show great distress when the mother leaves, but upon her return they may simultaneously seek close contact but also hit her or kick her (Development Across the Life Span, R.S.P, 2011). As soon as my mom would try to get close to me I would hit her n be so angry with her. I didnâ€™t stop being afraid of them until I was about 7 years old.

At the age 6 going on 7, I remember playing doctor with my cousins. I was a little more comfortable but still a little afraid. I never wanted to be the patient. I always prefer being the doctor or nurse. When playing doctor we all had a role and we all got along with each other. I can relate this to â€œcooperative play; play in which children genuinely interact with one another, taking turns playing, or devising contests (Development Across the Life Span,2011). I use to like to play this with my cousins. It was one of my favorite childhood games.

In the sixth grade, I remember my teacher asking us what we wanted to be when we grow up as other students started answering. I started to think about it n I had no clue. I was very nervous because it was getting close to being my turn to answer the question. I didnâ€™t know what to say, so before it was my turn one of my friends said that she wanted to be a teacher. So after my friend the teacher asked me, â€œSo Erica what would u like to be when you grow upâ€, and I replied â€œWell I want to become a teacher like youâ€. But in reality that wasnâ€™t true I was just afraid at that age to say that I didnâ€™t know yet. I was sad that day because I kept thinking about what I wanted to become and nothing came to mind I was just so undecided and I kept thinking what if I never figure out what I want to be. By the end of that week it didnâ€™t cross my head anymore.
