

A photograph showing several healthcare workers in a clinical setting, wearing blue protective gowns, masks, and hairnets. They are attending to a patient who is lying down. The scene is dimly lit, with light coming from windows in the background. The workers are focused on their task, and the patient is being supported by the staff. The overall atmosphere is one of a serious medical environment.

Will We Survive Ebola:

Global Health Risk Framework National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Sciences Policy, 2016-06-06 Since the 2014 Ebola outbreak many public and private sector leaders have seen a need for improved management of global public health emergencies The effects of the Ebola epidemic go well beyond the three hardest hit countries and beyond the health sector Education child protection commerce transportation and human rights have all suffered The consequences and lethality of Ebola have increased interest in coordinated global response to infectious threats many of which could disrupt global health and commerce far more than the recent outbreak In order to explore the potential for improving international management and response to outbreaks the National Academy of Medicine agreed to manage an international independent evidence based authoritative multistakeholder expert commission As part of this effort the Institute of Medicine convened four workshops in summer of 2015 to inform the commission report The presentations and discussions from the Workshop on Resilient and Sustainable Health Systems to Respond to Global Infectious Disease Outbreaks are summarized in this report
