 Data* examines the implications of the rise of body monitoring and digital self tracking for how we inhabit experience and imagine our everyday worlds and futures Through a focus on how it feels to live in environments where data is emergent present and characterized by a sense of uncertainty the authors argue for a new interdisciplinary approach to understanding the implications of self tracking which attends to its past present and possible future Building on social science approaches the book accounts for the concerns of scholars working in design philosophy and human computer interaction It problematizes the body and senses in relation to data and tracking devices presents an accessible analytical account of the sensory and affective experiences of self tracking and questions the status of big data In doing so it proposes an agenda for
