This book brings together a collection of his published material that reflects the role played by tourism in development both in societies emerging from Western colonialism and in societies previously part of the Soviet system. The overarching theme looks at how promoted as a tool for development, tourism can lead to conflict between competing elites but can also empower groups previously subject to constraint by traditional authorities. Tradition is intensely manipulatable and always reflects power relations. Such pressure on tradition is but one aspect of tourism's wider social impacts. This includes changes in economic and social structure which for many constitute social problems that need to be addressed. At the same time, sustainability, though apparently a worthy aim, can be a problematic concept especially when applied to traditional cultures and may conflict with such ideals as egalitarianism. ICCM 2012 Proceedings, Handbook of Language Analysis in Psychology Morteza Dehghani, Ryan L. Learning with Nested Generalized Exemplars Steven L. Salzberg, 2012-12-06 Machine Learning is one of the oldest and most intriguing areas of Artificial Intelligence From the moment that computer visionaries first began to conceive the potential for general purpose symbolic computation the concept of a machine that could learn by itself has been an ever present goal Today although there have been many implemented computer programs that can be said to learn we are still far from achieving the lofty visions of self organizing automata that spring to mind when we think of machine learning We have established some base camps and scaled some of the foothills of this epic intellectual adventure but we are still far from the lofty peaks that the imagination conjures up Nevertheless a solid foundation of theory and technique has begun to develop around a variety of specialized learning tasks Such tasks include discovery of optimal or effective parameter settings for controlling processes automatic acquisition or refinement of rules for controlling behavior in rule driven systems and automatic classification and diagnosis of items on the basis of their features Contributions include algorithms for optimal parameter estimation feedback and adaptation algorithms strategies for credit blame assignment techniques for rule and category acquisition theoretical results dealing with learnability of various classes by formal automata and empirical investigations of the abilities of many different learning algorithms in a diversity of application areas

Phaf,2012-12-06 Modern research in neural networks has led to powerful artificial learning systems while recent work in the psychology of human memory has revealed much about how natural systems really learn including the role of unconscious implicit memory processes Regrettably the two approaches typically ignore each other This book combining the approaches should contribute to their mutual benefit New empirical work is presented showing dissociations between implicit and explicit memory performance Recently proposed explanations for such data lead to a new connectionist learning procedure CALM Categorizing and Learning Module which can learn with or without supervision and shows practical advantages over many existing procedures Specific experiments are simulated by a network model ELAN composed of CALM modules A working memory extension to the model is also discussed that could give it symbol manipulation abilities The book will be of interest to memory psychologists and connectionists as well as to cognitive scientists who in the past have tended to restrict themselves to symbolic models
