Valuation of Taxable Services – Section 67

1. Introduction

1.1 Section 66B of the Finance Act, 1994 levies a charge of service tax at a prescribed percentage of the value of taxable services provided or agreed to be provided. Therefore, service tax is payable on 'value of taxable services'.

1.2 Unlike section 3 of the Central Excise Act, 1944 which does not integrate the valuation of excisable goods within the charging provision, under the service tax regime, the value of taxable service is integrated within the charging provision itself. This therefore implies that in case there is no value, there cannot be any service tax. Unlike Central Excise, where goods manufactured but supplied free are liable for payment of duty, there can be no service tax on services which are provided free of cost.

1.3 Further, since both the value as well as the rate of service tax is integrated into the charging provision itself, any collection of service tax on an alternative basis like composition, abatement, etc. can be optional only. Further, the charge under such alternative scheme cannot exceed the charge of service tax as prescribed under the normal mechanism of section 66B i.e. 12% of the value.

1.4 Section 67 of the Act read with the Service Tax (Determination of Value) Rules, 2006 exhaustively deal with the principles of valuation of taxable services. This article deals with the provisions of section 67 of the Act. The Service Tax (Determination of Value) Rules, 2006 are not discussed in this article.

2. Broad Scheme of Valuation

2.1 Section 67 of the Finance Act, 1994 provides for the valuation of taxable service.

2.2 Sub-section (1) thereof visualises three alternate situations as summarised in the table below:

	Situation	Valuation Mechanism
(i)	Where the provision of service is for a consideration in money	Gross amount charged by the service provider for such service provided or to be provided by him
(ii)	Where the provision of service is for a consideration not wholly or partly consisting of money	Such amount in money, with the addition of service tax charged, as is equivalent to the consideration
(iii)	Where the provision of service is for a consideration which is not ascertainable	The amount as may be determined in the prescribed manner
