

Select a suitable patient experience to write up
e.g. one that:
Discusses an unusual, rare or new trend in patient presentation and associated nursing interventions
Describes a commonly seen patient presentation, but which discusses new, alternative or unreported nursing approaches or interventions
Identifies and discusses a challenging or perplexing nursing dilemma
Raises and discusses related issues other than nursing interventions, such as the role of the veterinary nursing or professional issues

Gain consent from your employer and the patient's owner if necessary

Identify three to four key nursing issues associated with the veterinary care and treatment that the patient received, which could be developed in the discussion section of your PCR

Carry out a literature search — use a medical database such as PubMed or Medline to obtain relevant information about your patient's presentation and veterinary care and determine if any similar case reports have been published. It may help to review human nursing journals to ascertain if any similar or related nursing issues have been covered in these and which may be transferable to the veterinary patient

Prepare and write up your PCR using accepted academic conventions and writing style (refer to next month's article for more specific guidance on section headings and content)

Choose a journal for submission of the article. Journals, such as The Veterinary Nurse, aim to add to the profession's body of knowledge by publishing these types of articles. Consider the audience you would like to reach with your article and determine which journal is most likely to reach this audience. Check with the particular journal whether your PCR would be considered for publication

Submit article — depending on the journal that you submit to, your PCR may undergo a peer-review process. There will then be reviewer comments to address, so that the time from submission to publication can be 3–4 months

Gutman, 2024-06-01 The ability to demonstrate that a specific health care profession provides valuable and effective services that meet society's health needs is a major objective for all health care academicians and researchers. Such skills are critical to ensure service reimbursement from an increasingly small pool of health care dollars. Demonstrating clinical effectiveness depends on the reporting of written research results through journal publication so that the health care community and larger society will be able to access and read evidence supporting health care services. Today several clinical reporting standard guidelines have been created by researchers to enhance the ability of readers to evaluate the quality and value of studies. Journal Article Writing and Publication is the first text to compile those clinical research reporting standards in one source and helps educators and novice researchers to better understand the skills needed for journal publication. Health care researchers must begin using these reporting standards in order to write manuscripts that are both correctly formatted and transparently convey all critical study strengths and limitations. Educators must teach these reporting standards to students who must evaluate research reports as consumers and possible future contributors to the literature through their own writing. Journal Article Writing and Publication by Dr. Sharon A. Gutman, a former editor of the American Journal of Occupational Therapy, provides specific guidelines based on the most commonly accepted reporting standards for the preparation and writing of general research studies, intervention effectiveness studies, instrument development and testing studies, and case reports. A section is devoted to helping authors understand the rules governing the reporting of statistical data in text and tables. Separate sections help authors understand the manuscript preparation and submission process, the revision process, and the etiquette guiding communication with editors and reviewers. Guidelines for the preparation of scholarly discussion papers and editorials are also provided. Journal Article Writing and Publication also features a section that aims to help doctoral students and newly minted faculty turn academic work and dissertations into publishable journal articles. Suggestions are provided to help clinicians turn clinical data into research databases that could serve as the foundation for pilot studies. Finally, information is provided to help authors better understand the ethical considerations of publication, including plagiarism, dual submissions, inappropriate authorship, copyright, and conflict of interest. Nancy
