Transportation Planning Handbook ITE (Institute of Transportation Engineers), Michael D. Meyer, 2016-08-01 A multi disciplinary approach to transportation planning fundamentals The Transportation Planning Handbook is a comprehensive practice oriented reference that presents the fundamental concepts of transportation planning alongside proven techniques This new fourth edition is more strongly focused on serving the needs of all users the role of safety in the planning process and transportation planning in the context of societal concerns including the development of more sustainable transportation solutions The content structure has been redesigned with a new format that promotes a more functionally driven multimodal approach to planning design and implementation including guidance toward the latest tools and technology The material has been updated to reflect the latest changes to major transportation resources such as the HCM MUTCD HSM and more including the most current ADA accessibility regulations Transportation planning has historically followed the rational planning model of defining objectives identifying problems generating and evaluating alternatives and developing plans Planners are increasingly expected to adopt a more multi disciplinary approach especially in light of the rising importance of sustainability and environmental concerns This book presents the fundamentals of transportation planning in a multidisciplinary context giving readers a practical reference for day to day answers Serve the needs of all users Incorporate safety into the planning process Examine the latest transportation planning software packages Get up to date on the latest standards recommendations and codes Developed by The Institute of Transportation Engineers this book is the culmination of over seventy years of transportation planning solutions fully updated to reflect the needs of a changing society For a comprehensive guide with practical answers The Transportation Planning Handbook is an essential reference

Impact and Implementation of the 55-mile-per-hour Speed Limit United States. Congress. House. Committee on Public Works and Transportation. Subcommittee on Surface Transportation,1987 Access Management Donald L. Bowman,1998 This report analyzes comprehensive highway access management programs and looks at the potential benefits and legal limits to Virginia adopting such a program to replace Virginia s rather limited site specific permitting process In 1942 Virginia passed legislation defining the right of private homeowners and commercial establishments to make connections to state highways Va Code 33 1 197 private entrances and 33 1 198 commercial entrances The statutes established a permit process for commercial and private entrances to state highways administered by VDOT in accordance with the Minimum Standards of Entrances to State Highways However the Minimum Standards do not establish a comprehensive access management plan for Virginia s highway systems and have been criticized for being too permissive In 1980 Colorado became the first state to enact a comprehensive highway access management code with strict safety and traffic criteria for private accesses to public highways Since that time Florida and New Jersey have also adopted comprehensive programs However Virginia s access management process continues to be a case by case permit review process This report considers the relative benefits of access management analyzes the legal obstacles in Virginia for a comprehensive program and discusses options Virginia might consider The report also includes an analysis of Virginia s legal and regulatory framework within which an access management program would operate and two alternative models for access management regulation to assist policy makers Addressing I-81 Transportation Needs ,2007 Traffic Engineering ,1972 Monthly Checklist of State Publications Library of Congress. Harris,1992 This synthesis will be of interest to engineering managers design engineers traffic engineers computer personnel and others interested in advanced computer applications for highway design and operations

Information is provided on the history of knowledge based expert systems KBES current applications of these systems in transportation departments potential applications and hardware and software requirements Additionally some detailed programming information from two operational expert systems is included There is growing use of computers in transportation departments and KBES represent an area in which several highway agencies are gaining experience and obtaining promising results This report of the Transportation Research Board describes the current state of the practice with respect to KBES as well as the historical development of expert systems and the more general field of artificial intelligence Experience with expert systems in transportation is summarized including discussions of expert systems in operation and in development based on a review of the literature and a survey of the states and experts in this field Pavement Markings Bruce E. Friedman, National Cooperative Highway Research Program, 2006 TRB's National Cooperative Highway Research Program NCHRP Synthesis 356 Pavement Markings Design and Typical Layout Details identifies variations in pavement marking designs practices and policies as provided by 48 of 50 state departments of transportation and transportation agencies from the District of Columbia Puerto Rico and four cities Highway Research Record, 1971 Examination of Core Highway Capacity Manual Concepts Brian L. Smith, 2002 The Highway Capacity Manual HCM is one of the most widely used traffic engineering guidance documents in the world It was originally published in 1950 and has been under constant revision since Unfortunately due to past cost and time constraints associated with traffic data collection much of information in the manual is based on research conducted using relatively small data sets This calls into question the statistical significance of some of the manual's material The Virginia Smart Travel Laboratory is a nationally unique research facility The distinguishing feature of the laboratory is its direct connection to operational VDOT transportation management systems This gives the laboratory access to unprecedented quantities of traffic data The purpose of this research project is to use this data to investigate a key concept of the HCM freeway traffic lane distribution An important consideration of transportation management is the distribution of lane use by vehicles This distribution plays a significant role in how traffic management devices such as variable message signs lane control signals and ramp meters are utilized Unfortunately according to the HCM when two or more lanes are available for traffic in a single direction the distribution in lane use varies widely there are not typical lane distributions An investigation of this concept using a large set of data from freeways in the urbanized Hampton Roads region of Virginia led to the following conclusions The distribution of vehicles along a specific link of a freeway system does tend to follow predictable trends by time of day A missing data estimation procedure can be developed that exploits the consistency of lane distribution by time of day and location This estimation methodology proved to accurately estimate missing detector data generally producing results within the 6% 8% error range Finally the report presents the following recommendations to VDOT VDOT should collect and archive traffic data at the lane level to support future applications such as the missing data estimation methodology VDOT should use the lane distribution based missing data estimation methodology described in this report in Smart Traffic Centers and permanent count stations located on freeways VDOT should formally transmit this report to TRB for committee consideration as the next version of the HCM is developed     Virginia State Publications in Print ,1990     The Virginia Register of Regulations ,2005
