The U S Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service USDA ERS maintains four highly related but distinct geographic classification systems to designate areas by the degree to which they are rural The original urban rural code scheme was developed by the ERS in the 1970s Rural America today is very different from the rural America of 1970 described in the first rural classification report At that time migration to cities and poverty among the people left behind was a central concern The more rural a residence the more likely a person was to live in poverty and this relationship held true regardless of age or race Since the 1970s the interstate highway system was completed and broadband was developed Services have become more consolidated into larger centers Some of the traditional rural industries farming and mining have prospered and there has been rural amenity based in migration Many major structural and economic changes have occurred during this period These factors have resulted in a quite different rural economy and society since 1970 In April 2015 the Committee on National Statistics convened a workshop to explore the data estimation and policy issues for rationalizing the multiple classifications of rural areas currently in use by the Economic Research Service ERS Participants aimed to help ERS make decisions regarding the generation of a county rural urban scale for public use taking into consideration the changed social and economic environment This report summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop

Comparative Urban Land Use Planning Les Stein,2017-09-25

The concept of the smart city as the confluence of urban planning and technological innovation has become a predominant feature of public policy discourse Despite its expanding influence however there is little consensus on the precise meaning of a smart city One reason for this ambiguity is that the term means different things to different disciplines For some the concept of the smart city refers to advances in sustainability and green technologies For others it refers to the deployment of information and communication technologies as next generation infrastructure This volume focuses on a third strand in this discourse specifically technology driven changes in democracy and civic engagement In conjunction with issues related to power grids transportation networks and urban sustainability there is a growing need to examine the potential of smart cities as democratic ecologies for citizen empowerment and user driven innovation What is the potential of smart cities to become platforms for bottom up civic engagement in the context of next generation communication data sharing and application development What are the consequences of layering public spaces with computationally mediated technologies Foucault's notion of the panopticon a metaphor for a surveillance society suggests that smart technologies deployed in the design of smart cities should be evaluated in terms of the ways in which they enable or curtail new urban literacies and emergent social practices
