Based Participatory Research CBPR both enhances the research while addressing these ethical complexities Although CBPR encompasses different levels of community engagement in general the participants or co researchers are involved in the formulation of the research questions and methodologies because they are central to the conversation about what should be researched and how Participants are directly involved in formulating the study problems and finding solutions and usually the goal is to create social change that can be applied to and potentially transform the community Learning with Women in Jail Creating Community Based Participatory Research documents the research process to better understand the causes for incarceration and recidivism The study used a CBPR framework so that the people who had directly experienced incarceration would lead the research as much as possible from framing the research questions and methodologies to data capture and analysis

HALFWAY ROCK JOHN T. BULLERJAHN, 2024-08-28 It's great fun seeing a theatrical production You settle into your seat peruse the program and look forward to what awaits When the curtain opens you see what we want you to see As the show progresses you think the director has the easiest job in the world It's so simple so easy so effortless you begin to think That's something I could do No No you can't It's the director and production staff working together that give that illusion Illusion is just part of the process What most people aren't aware of is behind that illusion the real drama has already unfolded many times backstage well before the curtain rises for them There are more backstories behind the curtain than on stage all of which have played out countless times The lead soloist who up until dress rehearsal has always been pitch perfect and poised has suddenly developed a case of tonality unawareness and remains mute and unmoving in her dressing room The producer has the filter of a Pall Mall and it never occurs to her this might pose problems With the subtlety of a brain surgeon wielding a Sawzall the job gets done in spite of nonstop intimidation The director a no nonsense it's all about the show perfectionist with thirty laser focused years of productions is clueless that there's more to life than a script a stage and darkened theatres As such blinded by stage lights he can't see that his life is inexorably slipping away His assistant director a feisty 5'3" blonde is a force to be reckoned with She can handle a recalcitrant teamster with a look and a voice straight out of The Exorcist She has the uncanny talent of being able to remember each cast member by name no matter how large the cast She can cut to the chase before anyone finds their keys As a woman with pragmatic optimism she can see voids in many areas she could fill even if her life experience is barely over her boss's work history All the above would be for naught if not for her ability to keep her aforementioned OCD director in line with the subtlety and skill of a master magician She does have her magic Throw in an eclectic assortment of offstage characters unforeseen events ranging from technical to an on the air ambush by the local radio interviewer and add to that the temperament that is theatre you have all the elements for a perfect storm For those who want a backstage glimpse into what happens from script to stage you've bought the right ticket Halfway Rock is a breezy lighthearted romp through the vagaries twists and seemingly endless turn of events that is an integral part of any production Somehow things work out After all the show must go on Well that's the idea anyway
