Investigation United States. Congress. House. Committee on Ways and Means, 1953 Friedl William F. Kuhlke, 3rd, Willison, Marilyn Murray, 2005 Hundreds of books have been published about the atrocities that occurred in World War II. Now it is time to complete the story by telling the other side the story of a non Jewish girl and what she endured. The fact that Adolf Hitler attempted to annihilate the Jewish race has been rightfully taught to subsequent generations to insure that something as heinous as The Holocaust is never repeated. Unfortunately many people have mistakenly assumed that the entire German population was in line with the Nazi dogma and shared Hitler's irrational hatred and diabolical solutions. Friedl tells another side of the story. Her true story shows many beliefs to be quite wrong. Friedl's story is divided into two parts which helps the reader absorb the duality of her wartime experiences. Book One relates to her childhood years and her loving family, her musical development, her orders to leave her music and work in support of the war effort, her conscription into the Nazi Army and her many horrible wartime experiences far from home. In Book Two Friedl begins her post war journey home. We travel with her as far as the train tracks allow and then she begins to walk and hitchhike. As she reaches the American Army controlled border she, as all returning Germans did, is detained until all formal paperwork is completed and entrance into Germany is authorized. This begins a six week plus adventure not knowing if her family has survived during which she is adopted by a German farm couple who had recently lost a daughter and a growing friendship with a German speaking American Sergeant Jackson. Finally her entrance into her homeland is authorized. Through her eyes we travel on the final leg of her journey to Frankfurt while viewing the horror, destruction and shambles of the former most perfectly preserved medieval city, her beloved Frankfurt. Something Lethal in the Garden Basil Eleftheriou, 2007-09 Upon retirement Professor Dean returned to his childhood roots at Salsbury Harbor, Maine, on Mt Desert Island, Maine. His three children appeared well settled although people wondered where they had found the money for such a good living since professors don't make good salaries when active or when retired. When he died suddenly the coroner pronounced his death from natural causes. But a young ambitious detective thought otherwise and pursued his hunches in vain until he found a young coroner trainee who gave him ideas about death due to genetic linkages. Finding courage in such medical keys the detective discovers Professor Dean's genetic traits which enabled the killer to dispense with the good old prof without suspicion. But with the help of the coroner trainee the detective solves the death and its cause as well as solves a crime of robbery that involved a plane crash and lots of money laundered from drug running. Bentley's Miscellany, 1842
