Investigating Complex Phenomena: Bridging between Systems Thinking and Modeling in Science Education Tom Bielik, Moritz Krell, Laura Zangori, Orit Ben Zvi Assaraf, 2023-11-15 Understanding the complexity of the natural world and making sense of phenomena

is one of the main goals of science and science education When investigating complex phenomena such as climate change or pandemic outbreaks students are expected to engage in systems thinking by considering the boundaries of the investigated system identifying the relevant components and their interactions and exploring system attributes such as hierarchical organization dynamicity feedback loops and emergence Scientific models are tools that support students reasoning and understanding of complex systems and students are expected to develop their modeling competence and to engage in the modeling process by constructing testing revising and using models to explain and predict phenomena Computational modeling tools for example provide students with the opportunity to explore big data run simulations and investigate complex systems Therefore both systems thinking and modeling approaches are important for science education when investigating complex phenomena

Levels of Explanation Katie Robertson, Alastair Wilson, 2024-11-30 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations The different sciences furnish us with a wide variety of explanations some work at macroscopic scales some work at microscopic scales and some operate across different levels How do these different explanatory levels relate to one another and what is an explanatory level in the first place Over the last 50 years more and more philosophers both reductionists and anti reductionists no longer subscribe to the idea that the best explanation resides at the fundamental physical level New challenges arise from the success of scientific explanations employing multi level models which mix levels of explanation from distinctive differences between levels structures in biology cognitive science and social science from the apparently radical reimagining of the explanatory role of spacetime in our current best theories of fundamental physics and from the enduring mystery of how higher level explanations are possible in the first place These questions naturally connect to classic philosophical ways of thinking about the relationships between levels reduction emergence and fundamentality This volume presents a snapshot of cutting edge research on explanatory levels from their conceptual foundations to the details of how they are used in scientific practice
