Ludwig van Beethoven

The gifted young Ludwig van Beethoven had already composed his first piece of music by the time he was twelve., at the age of sixteen, he went to study in Vienna, Austria, the of European cultural life at the time and home to the most brilliant musicians and composers of the period. Beethoven proved to be an imaginative composer.

..... Beethoven remembered for his great genius, but also for his strong and difficult personality. In one infamous incident, Beethoven became so annoyed with a waiter that he behaved rudely, emptying a plate of food over the man's head., he could be quite egotistical, saying once, "There are and will be thousands of princes. There is only one Beethoven." anyone in the audience talked during a concert, he would stop immediately and walk out. Many in musical and aristocratic circles admired Beethoven his difficult behavior, and they knew he might lose his at any time. They always forgave his insults and moody temperament. Beethoven was also well-known for his and eccentric behavior. He often walked through the streets of Vienna muttering to himself, and he completely neglected his personal appearance. Because he would always let his clothes get dirty, his friends would during the night and replace them with new ones.

Tesarik, 1978 Pulltrouser Swamp B. L. Turner, Peter D. Harrison, 2014-09-10 Among Mesoamericanists the agricultural basis of the ancient Maya civilization of the Yucatan Peninsula has been an important topic of research and controversy. Interest in the agricultural system of the Maya greatly increased as new discoveries showed that the lowland Maya were not limited to slash and burn technology as had been previously believed but used a variety of more sophisticated agricultural techniques and practices including terracing, raised fields and perhaps irrigation. Because of the nature of the data and because this form of agricultural technology had been key to explanations of state formation elsewhere in Mesoamerica, raised field agriculture became a particular focus of investigation. Pulltrouser Swamp conclusively demonstrates the existence of hydraulic raised field agriculture in the Maya lowlands between 150 B.C. and A.D. 850. It presents the findings of the University of Oklahoma's Pulltrouser Swamp Project, an NSF supported interdisciplinary study that combined the talents of archaeologists, anthropologists, geographers, paleobotanists, biologists and zoologists to investigate the remains of the Maya agricultural system in the swampy region of northern Belize. By examining soils, fossil pollen and other plant remains, gastropods, relic settlements, ceramics, lithics and other important evidence, the Pulltrouser Swamp team has clearly demonstrated that the features under investigation are relics of Maya made raised and channelized fields and associated canals. Other data suggest the nature of the swamps in which the fields were constructed, the tools used for construction and cultivation, the possible crops cultivated and at least one type of settlement near the fields with its chronology. This verification of raised fields provides dramatic evidence of a large and probably organized workforce engaged in sophisticated and complex agricultural technology. As record of this evidence, Pulltrouser Swamp is a work of seminal importance for all students and scholars of New World prehistory.
