Evaluation of ammonia 'fixation' components in actual refinery sour waters American Petroleum Institute. Committee on Refinery Environmental Control, 1980    Application of buoyant mass transfer media to hazardous material spills

Gaynor W. Dawson, J. A. McNeese, J. A. Coates, 1980    EPA-600/2, 1980    General Technical Report SO, 1977    Life Cycle of the Phosphoria Formation J.R. Hein, 2003-12-18 Geological geoenvironmental and resource studies were completed to study a world class phosphate ore in the Western US Phosphate Field This integrated multi agency multidisciplinary research emphasized 1 Geological and geochemical baseline characterization of the deposit and associated rocks 2 Delineation assessment and spatial analysis of phosphate resources and lands disturbed by mining 3 Contaminant residence reaction pathways and environmental fate associated with the occurrence development and use of phosphate rock and 4 Depositional origin and evolution of the Phosphoria Formation and deposit and geoenvironmental modeling    The Organic Geochemistry of Deep Ground Waters and Radionuclide Partitioning Experiments Under Hydrothermal Conditions Jeffrey L. Means, 1983    Geothermal Fluids Keith Nicholson, 2012-12-06 This book introduces aqueous geochemistry applied to geothermal systems It is specifically designed for readers first entering into the world of geothermal energy from a variety of scientific and engineering backgrounds and consequently is not intended to be the last word on geothermal chemistry Instead it is intended to provide readers with sufficient background knowledge to permit them to subsequently understand more complex texts and scientific papers on geothermal energy The book is structured into two parts The first explains how geothermal fluids and their associated chemistry evolve and shows how the chemistry of these fluids can be used to deduce information about the resource The second part concentrates on survey techniques explaining how these should be performed and the procedures which need to be adopted to ensure reliable sampling and analytical data are obtained A geothermal system requires a heat source and a fluid which transfers the heat towards the surface The fluid could be molten rock magma or water This book concentrates on the chemistry of the water or hydrothermal systems Consequently magma energy systems are not considered Hot dry rock HDR systems are similarly outside the scope of this text principally because they contain no indigenous fluid for study Both magma energy and HDR systems have potential as energy sources but await technological developments before they can be exploited commercially Geothermal systems based on water however are proven energy resources which have been successfully developed throughout the world

Development of Standard Methods for the Collection and Analysis of Precipitation Mark E. Peden, 1986    The Felton-Herron Creek, Mill Creek Pilot Watershed Studies Thomas M. Long-term Effects of Land Application of Domestic Wastewater Benham-Blair & Affiliates,Engineering Enterprises,1979      NASA Technical Note ,1974      Methods for Determination of Inorganic Substances in Water and Fluvial Sediments Marvin J. Fishman,Linda C. Friedman,1989      Processing and Use of Organic Sludge and Liquid Agricultural Wastes P. L'Hermite,2013-06-29 Disposal of organic sludge and liquid agricultural wastes is a universal problem Their production cannot be halted and as steps are taken to maintain or improve the quality of rivers and lakes it grows in quantity The Commission s early awareness of the need for action to prepare for substantial growth in the Community s sludge disposal problem led to the setting up of the COST 68 project to coordinate and guide European research and development work with particular emphasis on recycling sludge to agricultural land Two years ago the field of research activities was extended to liquid agricultural wastes This Symposium is the latest opportunity to provide a comprehensive review of the results of the project to define current trends in practice and to establish by discussion the priorities for research over the next few years The development of instrumentation and of analytical techniques during the period has extended our knowledge of the organic and inorganic constituents of sewage sludge and agricultural wastes and enabled us more readily to identify and measure the risks to which our general environment may be exposed when disposing of it This evolution of understanding is a continuing process and an essential guide to the modification of disposal practices to achieve safer and more efficient operations However it is important to take a broad view of the application of research findings in the light of the considerable contrast in conditions in different parts of the world      Aquatic Disposal Field Investigations, Galveston, Texas, Offshore Disposal Site Thomas D. Wright,David B. Mathis,James M. Brannon,1978 This study was part of an investigation to determine the environmental effects of offshore dredged material disposal at Galveston Texas The biological portion of the study was conducted in two phases a pilot survey of the dredged material disposal site DMDS to determine the areal distribution of the biota and sediments and an experimental study to assess the effect of dredged material disposal on the biota at selected sites in the DMDS Three experimental sites were investigated a sandy bottom that received sand shell and silt clay dredged material a muddy bottom that received sand and shell dredged material and a muddy bottom that received silt clay dredged material The magnitude of the effect on the benthic populations could not be accurately assessed because adequate predisposal data on natural sediment and benthic population changes were not available Dredged material deposits had no apparent effect on feeding habits of fish or on the distribution of nekton although some nektonic species may have congregated in the turbid water following dredged material disposal Zooplankton and phytoplankton studies detected no population changes during disposal that could not have been due to sampling error It is probable that sudden abiotic changes and commercial fishing activities cause more destruction of biota than dredging related
