Skinner, 2017-12-22 Excerpt from The Plough the Loom and the Anvil 1852 Vol 5 Part I IN a former number it was promised that the review of Mr Rantoul s speech should be continued We desired to show to our readers that the knowledge of political economy displayed therein was on a par with the accuracy of the facts each and every one of which had been shown to have no foundation but in the fertile imaginations of those who had made the hon Gentleman the conduit through which to convey to the world a greater mass of misstatements than we had ever before seen compressed into so small a space It is proposed now to redeem that promise About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

The Plough, the Loom and the Anvil, Vol. 1 John S. Skinner, 2016-12-08 Excerpt from The Plough the Loom and the Anvil Vol 1 July 1848 If we look around us even now we see commerce carrying war and desolation into China We see it promoting the slave trade We see in the depopulation of India by French and English armies the effects of commerce We may see it in Algeria and in Tahiti wasted by French armies We may see it in the perpetual wars between England and France for Worthless colonies We see it now in the unceasing changes and consequent ruin of the British West Indies That commerce between distant nations is very desirable is not to be doubted It is well that the man of Old England and New England should have tea and sugar and coffee and that the man of Cuba and Brazil should have clothing but that the inordinate love of commerce manifested by Holland England and France has tended to advance civilization I am unable to perceive The real civilizer of the world is agriculture and the highest civilization will invariably be found where the labors of the farmer are most aided by science and where they are most largely rewarded by our great mother earth About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
