Urban Planning Theory Since 1945:

Urban Planning Theory since 1945 Nigel Taylor, 1998-06-11 Following the Second World War modern systems of urban and regional planning were established in Britain and most other developed countries In this book Nigel Taylor describes the changes in planning thought which have taken place since then He outlines the main theories of planning from the traditional view of urban planning as an exercise in physical design to the systems and rational process views of planning of the 1960s from Marxist accounts of the role of planning in capitalist society in the 1970s to theories about planning implementation and more recent views of planning as a form of communicative action Urban Planning Theory Since 1945 Nigel Taylor, 1998 This study describes the development of urban planning ideas since the end of World War II to the 1990s It outlines the main theories of planning from the traditional view of urban planning as an exercise in physical design to more recent views of planning as a form of communicative action Urban Planning Theory Since 1945 Nigel Taylor, 1998-06-30 Following the Second World War modern systems of urban and regional planning were established in Britain and most other developed countries In this book Nigel Taylor describes the changes in planning thought which have taken place since then He outlines the main theories of planning from the traditional view of urban planning as an exercise in physical design to the systems and rational process views of planning of the 1960s from Marxist accounts of the role of planning in capitalist society in the 1970s to theories about planning implementation and more recent views of planning as a form of communicative action

Urban Planning and its Discontents Darshini Mahadevia, Rutool Sharma, 2023-10-16 This book the first of its kind introduces various aspects of urban planning in India and contributes towards debates on changes required in the current practice Urban planning in India means many things to city residents and is used generically to include all interventions in the cities such as public policy design institutional design spatial and territorial plans infrastructure plans public administration community participation and their implementation through programmes schemes and projects While urban planning is expected to meet the global development agendas of equitable and just urbanisation climate change and sustainable development goals SDGs in practice it has largely remained confined to statutory spatial planning represented by Master Plan or Comprehensive Plan This volume delves into this world of urban planning as critical insiders to see how it works in India analysing the city level spatial plans the Master or Development Plans of select cities to assess whether these are capable of addressing the global agendas and coordinate with all other plans prepared for the city It examines whether it would work in reference to the contemporary issues SDGs and global agendas and discusses strategies on how to make it work better It also deals with each of the above stated criticisms of the practice and examines the debates data approaches agendas plans and the future of urban planning in India This book comes in at a time when the urban planners and policy makers have themselves begun to discuss a need to relook at urban planning practices and tools to meet the future requirements of urbanisation in India It will be a useful reference volume for the students scholars and practitioners alike and be of interest to researchers and students of urban planning architecture public administration civil engineering geography economics and sociology It will also be useful for policy makers and professionals working in the areas of town and country planning      Social Town Planning Clara Greed,2002-01-04 Many issues such as access for the disabled childcare facilities environmental matters and ethnic minority issues are excluded from town planning considerations by planning authorities This book introduces the concept of social town planning to integrate planning policy and practices with the cultural and social issues of the people they are planning for Part 1 provides background on the development of a social dimension to the predominantly physical land use based British town planning system Part 2 investigates a representative selection of minority planning topics in respect of gender race age and disability cross linked to the implications for mainstream policy areas such as housing rural planning and transport Part 3 discusses the likely influence of a range of global and European policy initiatives and organisations in changing the agenda of British town planning Planning for healthy cities sustainability social cohesion and equity are discussed Part 4 looks at the problem from a cultural perspective arguing that a great weakness in the British system resulting in ugly and impractical urban design has been the lack of concern among planners with social activities and cultural diversity Alternative more culturally inclusive approaches to planning are presented which might transcend the social spatial dichotomy such as urban time planning Concluding that the process of planning must change the authors agree that the culture and composition of the planning profession must particularly change to be more representative and reflective of the people they are planning for in terms of gender race and minority composition

Designing Tito's Capital Brigitte Le Normand, 2014-07-21 The devastation of World War II left the Yugoslavian capital of Belgrade in ruins Communist Party leader Josip Broz Tito saw this as a golden opportunity to recreate the city through his own vision of socialism In Designing Tito's Capital Brigitte Le Normand analyzes the unprecedented planning process called for by the new leader and the determination of planners to create an urban environment that would benefit all citizens Led first by architect Nikola Dobrovic and later by Milos Somborski planners blended the predominant school of European modernism and the socialist principles of efficient construction and space usage to produce a model for housing green space and working environments for the masses A major influence was modernist Le Corbusier and his Athens Charter published in 1943 which called for the total reconstruction of European cities transforming them into compact and verdant vertical cities unfettered by slumlords private interests and traffic congestion As Yugoslavia transitioned toward self management and market socialism the functionalist district of New Belgrade and its modern living were lauded as the model city of socialist man The glow of the utopian ideal would fade by the 1960s when market socialism had raised expectations for living standards and the government was eager for inhabitants to finance their own housing By 1972 a new master plan emerged under Aleksandar Dordevic fashioned with the assistance of American experts Espousing current theories about systems and rational process planning and using cutting edge computer technology the new plan left behind the dream for a functionalist Belgrade and instead focused on managing growth trends While the public resisted aspects of the new planning approach that seemed contrary to socialist values it embraced the idea of a decentralized city connected by mass transit Through extensive archival research and personal interviews with participants in the planning process Le Normand s comprehensive study documents the evolution of New Belgrade and its adoption and ultimate rejection of modernist principles while also situating it within larger continental and global contexts of politics economics and urban planning International Planning Studies Olivier Sykes,David Shaw,Brian Webb,2023-03-27 This book provides a comprehensive introduction to the evolving field of international planning studies It is an essential resource that situates planning as an international discipline and practice with an important role to play in delivering sustainable development across different scales in diverse global contexts A series of chapters covers past episodes of international influence and exchange in planning key concepts research strategies methods in contemporary international planning studies as well as ways of characterising and comparing planning systems The authors explore the emergence of a global agenda for planning through the activities and goal setting of international organisations and professional and civil society networks Transnational and cross border contexts and initiatives in different global regions and their relevance to planning are investigated An invaluable resource for students and researchers in planning studies this book offers an important reflection on the internationalisation of planning practice education and scholarship and the future prospects for planning and planning studies from an international perspective
