ANATOMY OF HEART

ANATOMY

- The heart, a vital organ in the circulatory system, is a hollow, muscular organ situated in the mediastinum, the central area of the thoracic cavity, between the lungs, and resting on the diaphragm.
- Its average weight is 300 grams (10.6 oz), and its size and weight are influenced by factors such as age, gender, body weight, physical activity, and any underlying heart disease.

STRUCTURE OF THE HEART

- Heart Layers:
  - Endocardium: The inner layer, made up of endothelial tissue, lines the heart's interior, including the valves.
  - Myocardium: The middle layer consists of muscle fibers that are responsible for the heart's pumping action.
  - Epicardium: The outermost layer, covering the heart's surface.
- Pericardium (Heart's Protective Sac):
  - The heart is encased in a pericardium, a fibrous sac that has two layers:
    - Visceral Pericardium: Closely adheres to the epicardium.
    - Parietal Pericardium: A tough, fibrous layer that attaches to the great vessels, diaphragm, sternum, and vertebral column, providing structural support to the heart within the mediastinum.
  - Pericardial Space: This space between the visceral and parietal pericardium contains about 20 mL of fluid, which lubricates the heart's surface and reduces friction during its contraction and relaxation cycles (systole and diastole).

HEART CHAMBERS

- The heart's pumping action is achieved through the rhythmic relaxation and contraction of its muscular walls in two top chambers (atria) and two bottom chambers (ventricles).
- Diastole (relaxation phase):
  - All four chambers relax simultaneously.
  - Allows ventricles to fill in preparation for contraction.
  - Often referred to as the period of ventricular filling.
- Systole (contraction phase):
  - Refers to events during the contraction of atria and ventricles.
  - Atrial and ventricular systoles do not occur simultaneously.
  - Atrial systole happens first, at the end of diastole.

- Ventricular systole follows atrial systole.
- This synchronization allows the ventricles to fully fill before ejecting blood.
- The right side of the heart (right atrium and right ventricle):
  - Distributes venous (deoxygenated) blood to the lungs via the pulmonary artery (pulmonary circulation) for oxygenation.
  - Pulmonary artery is the only artery in the body carrying deoxygenated blood.
  - The right atrium receives venous blood returning from the superior vena cava (head, neck, and upper extremities), inferior vena cava (trunk and lower extremities), and coronary sinus (coronary circulation).
- The left side of the heart (left atrium and left ventricle):
  - Distributes oxygenated blood to the rest of the body via the aorta (systemic circulation).
  - The left atrium receives oxygenated blood from the pulmonary circulation through four pulmonary veins.
- The heart lies in a rotated position within the chest cavity.
- Right ventricle is positioned anteriorly (just beneath the sternum).
- Left ventricle is located posteriorly.
- Due to its proximity to the chest wall, the apical impulse (or point of maximal impulse [PMI]) is easily detected during normal ventricular contraction.
- In a normal heart, the PMI is found at the intersection of the midclavicular line on the left chest wall and the fifth intercostal space.

HEART VALVES

ATRIOVENTRICULAR VALVES

- AV valves separate the atria from the ventricles.
- Tricuspid valve (three cusps/leaflets) separates the right atrium from the right ventricle.

Pediatric Critical Care Study Guide Steven E. Lucking, Frank A. Maffei, Robert F. Tamburro, Neal J.

Thomas, 2012-04-10 This is the first comprehensive study guide covering all aspects of pediatric critical care medicine. It fills a void that exists in learning resources currently available to pediatric critical care practitioners. The major textbooks are excellent references but do not allow concise reading on specific topics and are not intended to act as both text and study guide. There are also several handbooks available but these are usually written for general pediatric residents and lack the advanced physiology and pathophysiology required for the higher level pediatric critical care practitioner. Study Guide for
