The Photographic Invention of Whiteness Stephanie Polsky,2023-07-28 Focusing on the creation of the concept of Whiteness this study links early photographic imagery to the development and exploitation that were common in the colonial Atlantic World of the mid to late nineteenth century With the advent of the daguerreotype in the mid nineteenth century White European settlers could imagine themselves as a supra national community where the attainment of wealth was rapidly becoming accessible through colonisation Their dispersal throughout the colonial territories made possible the advent of a new representative type of Whiteness that eventually merged with the portrayal of modernity itself Over time the colonisation of the Atlantic World became synonymous with fascination itself within a European mind fixated upon both a racially subordinated world and the technical media through which it was represented In the intervening centuries images have acted as a medium of the imaginary allowing for ideas around classification and the measurement of value to travel and to situate themselves as universal means Contemporary societies still grapple with the residues of race gender class and sexuality first established by the contrived mores of this representational medium and those who were racialised by the camera as objects of fascination curiosity or concern have remained so well into the post digital era The book will be of interest to scholars working in history of photography art history colonialism and critical race theory Intellectual Property and General Legal Principles Graeme B.
