

Score Summary

The Career Personality Test included fifteen questions designed to measure your orientation with time and structure. Your answers were tabulated on a bipolar scale with the Judger personality type at one end and the Perceiver personality type at the other. Judgers tend to be organized, controlled and decisive, preferring order to chaos. Perceivers tend to be spontaneous, impulsive and adaptive, preferring freedom to structure. Your score on this scale is presented below:

Perceivers Explained

More so than in any of the other three personality dimensions, people usually exhibit a bit of both sides of this dyad. You may, for example, be very flexible and spontaneous in one part of your life, but more structured and organized in another part. Nevertheless, people do exhibit a general preference, and that preference is telling.

Perceivers appreciate flexibility, spontaneity, adaptiveness, freedom, tolerance, and individualism. Conversely, judgers appreciate decisiveness, planning, punctuality, order, tidiness, organization, schedules, and control.

Perceivers are most comfortable when they can maintain flexible schedules and don't have overly restrictive rules imposed on them. As a result, they are often self-employed or entrepreneurial. They abhor strict hierarchy and prefer to work to the beat of their own drum.

It is widely believed that this personality dyad is one of the greatest sources of workplace tension. Judgers tend to have very little tolerance with the free-spirited ways of the perceiver. Perceivers tend to be agitated at how controlling judgers can be.

Words People Might Use to Describe Perceivers:

- Spontaneous
- Flexible
- Free-spirited
- Genuine
- Relaxed
- Unorthodox
- Impulsive
- Laid-back and calm

Strengths of a Perceiver:

- Adapt well to changes.
- Are fun to be around and make life interesting.
- Can be entrepreneurial.
- Not afraid to take risks.
- Work well under pressure.

Weaknesses of a Perceiver:

- Leave things to the last minute.
- Can sometimes be chaotic.
- Can sometimes be too casual with other people's time.
