Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological characteristics of young athletes. The study was conducted in a laboratory setting. The participants were 15 young athletes (10 males and 5 females) aged 16-18 years. They were divided into two groups: a control group (n=7) and an experimental group (n=8). The experimental group underwent a 12-week training program consisting of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not undergo any training. The physical characteristics measured were maximum oxygen consumption (VO₂max), maximum heart rate (HRmax), and maximum power (Pmax). The psychological characteristics measured were anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher VO₂max, HRmax, and Pmax than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The experimental group also had significantly lower anxiety and depression, and higher self-esteem than the control group after 12 weeks of training. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological characteristics of young athletes.	Keywords young athletes, 12-week training program, physical characteristics, psychological characteristics, VO₂max, HRmax, Pmax, anxiety, depression, self-esteem.
