I have many friends in school. But Akash is my best friend. We read in the same class and same section. He is polite and well-mannered. He is an ideal student. He is very smart and intelligent. He always obeys his parents and teachers. He wants to become an engineer. His favourite game is cricket. He is the captain of our school team. Akash helps me to become a better person. We share our feelings, emotions, and happiness with each other. We study and play together. I want him to be successful in life. We hope our friendship will last forever.

and Women Making Friends in Early Modern France Lewis C. Seifert, Rebecca M. Wilkin, 2016-03-03 Today the friendships that grab people's imaginations are those that reach across inequalities of class and race. The friendships that seem to have exerted an analogous level of fascination in early modern France were those that defied the assumption inherited from Aristotle and patristic sources that friendships between men and women were impossible. Together the essays in Men and Women Making Friends in Early Modern France tell the story of the declining intelligibility of classical models of male friendship and of the rising prominence of women as potential friends. The revival of Plato's friendship texts in the sixteenth century challenged Aristotle's rigid ideal of perfect friendship between men. In the seventeenth century a new imperative of heterosociality opened a space for the cultivation of cross-gender friendships while the spiritual friendships of the Catholic Reformation modeled relationships that transcended the gendered dynamics of galanterie. Men and Women Making Friends in Early Modern France argues that the imaginative experimentation in friendships between men and women was a distinctive feature of early modern French culture. The ten essays in this volume address friend-making as a process that is creative of self and responsive to changing social and political circumstances. Contributors reveal how men and women fashioned gendered selves and also circumvented gender norms through concrete friendship practices. By showing that the benefits and the risks of friendship are magnified when gender roles and relations are unsettled, the essays in this volume highlight the relevance of early modern friend-making to friendship in the contemporary world.

Mind's World Alexander M. Schlutz, 2010-05-01 Winner of the 2009 International Conference on Romanticism's Jean Pierre Barricelli Award for the best book in Romanticism studies As the mental faculty that mediates between self and world mind and body the senses and the intellect imagination is indispensable for modern models of subjectivity From Ren Descartes's Meditations to the aesthetic and philosophical systems of the Romantic period to think about the subject necessarily means to address the problem of imagination In close readings of Descartes Kant Fichte Hardenberg Novalis and Coleridge and with a sustained return to the origins of the discourse about imagination in Greek antiquity Alexander Schlutz demonstrates that neither the unity of the subject itself nor the unity of the philosophical systems that are based on it can be conceptualized without recourse to imagination Yet philosophers like Descartes and Kant must deny imagination any such foundational role because of its dangerous connection to the body the senses and the unruly passions which threatens the desired autonomy of the rational subject The modern subject is simultaneously dependent upon and constructed in opposition to imagination and the resulting ambivalence about the faculty is one of the fundamental conditions of modern models of subjectivity Schlutz's readings of the Romantic poet philosophers Coleridge and Hardenberg highlight that also their texts are not free of fears about the faculty's disruptive potential and its connection to the body While imagination is now openly enlisted to produce the aesthetic unity of subjectivity it still threatens to unravel and destroy a subject that needs to keep the body and its desires at bay in order to secure its rational and moral autonomy The dark abyss of a self not in control of its thoughts feelings and desires is not overcome by the philosophical glorification of the subject's powers of imagination
