Issues in Intelligence Testing (test scores have this in them...)

1. Standardization

- 1. Stark truth is the establishment of performance norms and to the consistency to which the test is administered and scored

2. Methodology: the extent to which a test yields consistent results

- 1. assesses the consistency of scores on:
 - test-retest of the test
 - alternate forms of the test
 - re-testing the same individual
- 2. Construct validity and criterion validity both have very strong coefficients of at least .8
- Etc., are observed very reliable

3. Validity: Does test measure what it's intended to measure?

- 1. Does test correlate with other measures of same construct?
- 2. Valid inferences
 - IQ tests (i.e., IQ and the individual) correlate highly with academic achievement, especially in elementary school
 - Can the test performance be other socially related variables? The results are not spent on these test

4. Scores (are they to correct) by group (representative)

- 1. Normative (teacher never on average IQ, parent, lower)
- 2. 1976 California Norms out of IQ scores to place kids, children in classes because greater group of black children were placed in classes that normally handicapped?
- 3. One argument that IQ tests are NOT biased because they have good predictive validity -- some legal argument presented roughly as some case in Chicago -- this case out of IQ scores said as the argument for ethnic placement
