Advance payment of tax and tax deducted at source

Advance payment of tax and tax deducted at source (TDS) are two different concepts related to income tax.

Advance payment of tax refers to the payment of income tax in advance before the end of the financial year. This is usually done by taxpayers who expect to have a tax liability at the end of the year, based on their income and deductions. The payment of advance tax is mandatory for taxpayers whose tax liability is expected to be more than Rs. 10,000 in a financial year. Failure to pay advance tax can result in interest charges and penalties.

On the other hand, TDS refers to the tax deducted at source by the person making the payment. This is usually done by employers, banks, and other financial institutions when they make payments such as salary, interest, rent, or commission, to name a few. The TDS amount is then deposited with the government on behalf of the recipient. The TDS is a prepayment of the tax liability of the recipient, and it is adjusted against the final tax liability at the time of filing the income tax return.

In summary, while advance payment of tax is a voluntary payment made by the taxpayer, TDS is a mandatory deduction made by the payer while making a payment to the recipient.

Assessment of Income Tax

Assessment of income tax refers to the process of determining the amount of tax liability of an individual or a business entity. It is a process undertaken by the income tax department to ensure that taxpayers are correctly reporting their income, claiming deductions, and paying the correct amount of tax.

The assessment of income tax is done in two ways:

1. Self-assessment: This is when the taxpayer himself calculates the amount of tax due on his income and pays the tax on or before the due date. The taxpayer is required to file an income tax return (ITR) to declare his income, deductions claimed, and taxes paid.
2. Assessment by the Income Tax Department: The Income Tax Department may also conduct an assessment of the taxpayer's income tax return to ensure that it is complete and accurate. This assessment can be done in two ways:
  - a. Scrutiny Assessment: This is when the Income Tax Department examines the taxpayer's ITR in detail and may ask for additional information, documents or clarification on any issues related to the return.
