Photosynthesis is a process by which plants and other organisms use light energy to convert carbon dioxide and water into glucose and oxygen. The process occurs in the chloroplasts of plants and other photosynthetic organisms. The chloroplast is a specialized organelle that contains the pigments and enzymes necessary for photosynthesis. The process of photosynthesis can be divided into two main stages: the light-dependent reactions and the Calvin cycle. The light-dependent reactions occur in the thylakoid membranes of the chloroplast and involve the absorption of light energy and the conversion of water into oxygen and NADPH.
