

Function Mode	DS-OFF		DS-ON
	Step	No. of display digits	Step	No. of display digits
FM 1	25 kHz	4 digits	25 kHz	4 digits
FM 2	100 Hz	5 digits	12.5 kHz	5 digits
USB CW LSB	100 Hz	5 digits	500 Hz	5 digits The 0.0-9.9kHz range is repeatedly searched in 100Hz steps.

When the DS switch is ON in SSB/CW mode, the frequency is searched, that is, the digits for "kHz" and "100Hz" are set to "00" and the 0.0 to 9.9kHz frequency range is swept repeatedly at a speed of 60mS per step. If a signal is present during search swept, tone will be heard, allowing you to check the signal in SSB mode. It is thus possible to locate stations quickly.

NOTE:

If the transmitters are keyed in this Mode, a momentary tone will sound to remind you that the transceiver is in search mode.

3.4 MEMORY SWITCH

Using this switch, commonly used frequencies (repeaters, etc.) can be stored in the memory. Frequencies set by the VFO are stored in channels 1 through 5 by using the M switch. Stored frequencies can be called-up by placing the MR switch ON.

Fig. 3-2

Two different frequencies (transmit and receive) can be stored in channel 5, so the transceiver will operate on any repeater split. The receiver frequency is stored in memory just as for channels 1-4. To store the transmit frequency in memory, set the transmit frequency in the receiver mode and then press the M switch in the transmit mode. (See Fig. 3-3)

NOTE:

1. When a memory is vacant, the memory frequency is 144.0000MHz.
2. The memory frequency called-up by the MR switch is displayed in 5 digits, regardless of mode.

Fig. 3-3

3. To clear a frequency stored in memory, simply store a new frequency in that memory.
4. If you desire to retain the memories, back-up power should be supplied to the micro-computer.
 - (1) A power cord should be connected directly to the battery terminal.
 - (2) A back-up supply *(Part No. W09-0005-05) should be used.
 - * This is the same charger with the supplied accessory of the TR-2000.
5. In either case, back-up current of about 2.5mA is required.
6. If power is disconnected, the back-up function is retained for only 1-1.5 sec. If instantaneous voltage drop at engine starting continues for more than 2 sec, the micro computer will be reset and the memory cleared.
7. If you wish to retain the memories even when changing the installation between the car and the fixed station, utilize a back-up cord as shown in Fig. 3-4.

Fig. 3-4

3.5 SCAN OPERATION

TR-9000 scan operation is classified into auto scan (signal stops at a certain point and scan restarts when signal is absent) and free scan.

* Auto scan

Auto scan is available only in the FM mode.

1. Set the squelch control to the threshold point (noise disappears at no-signal time and BUSY lamp goes off).
2. Next, press the SCAN button to start scan operation.
3. When a signal is present, scanning stops. When the signal drops scan restarts automatically.
