Selling Empire Jonathan Eacott,2016-02-02 2017 Bentley Book Prize World History Association Linking four continents over three centuries Selling Empire demonstrates the centrality of India both as an idea and a place to the making of a global British imperial system In the seventeenth century Britain was economically politically and militarily weaker than India but Britons increasingly made use of India s strengths to build their own empire in both America and Asia Early English colonial promoters first envisioned America as a potential India hoping that the nascent Atlantic colonies could produce Asian raw materials When this vision failed to materialize Britain s circulation of Indian manufactured goods from umbrellas to cottons to Africa Europe and America then established an empire of goods and the supposed good of empire Eacott recasts the British empire s chronology and geography by situating the development of consumer culture the American Revolution and British industrialization in the commercial intersections linking the Atlantic and Indian Oceans From the seventeenth into the nineteenth century and beyond the evolving networks ideas and fashions that bound India Britain and America shaped persisting global structures of economic and cultural interdependence

The rise to world dominance of the Western nations in modern times and the rapid industrial growth of the West which outpaced the East in technical and military achievements have led to a historical eclipse of the ancient and brilliant cultures of Asia. Historian Donald F. Lach in his influential scholarly work Asia in the Making of Europe points out that an eclipse is never permanent, that this one was never total, and that there was a period in early modern times when Asia and Europe were close rivals in brilliance and mutual influence.
