

An illustration of five diverse people (three women and two men) standing around a small wooden table, engaged in a collaborative meeting. They are all reaching towards the center of the table, where a red mug and a black coffee cup are placed. The background is a solid light blue. A large white rectangular area, resembling a flipchart or a large sheet of paper, is positioned behind the group. It has a yellow checkered pattern at the top left corner and a vertical line down the middle. The text 'COMMUNICATION COURSES' is written in large, bold, black capital letters on the right side of this white area.

Communication about the Heart Failure Trajectory in Patients, their Families and Health Care Professionals Lisa Hjelmfors, 2018-03-14 Introduction There is an increasing awareness in the field of cardiology regarding the need for improved delivery of palliative care in patients with heart failure HF Professional guidelines have drawn attention to the importance of discussing the heart failure trajectory with patients and their families These discussions can include for example talking about the prognosis expectations for the future and care at the end of life It seems difficult for health care professionals to choose the right time for initiating these discussions They often avoid these conversations because they are afraid of taking away hope and make the patients and their families anxious Aim The overall aim of this thesis was to improve communication about the heart failure trajectory in patients their families and health care

Design and methods This thesis includes five studies using different designs and data collection methods Study I has a cross sectional design using a questionnaire to collect data to describe heart failure nurses perceptions of and practice in discussing prognosis and end of life care with heart failure patients Study II has a descriptive and comparative design where a survey was performed to describe Swedish and Dutch heart failure nurses reasons for discussing or not discussing prognosis and end of life care with patients Study III has an inductive and exploratory design where HF patients participated in focus groups or individual interviews Data was collected based on their perceptions of communication about the heart failure prognosis Study IV was a small scale ethnographic study describing and evaluating the delivery of a simulation when teaching third year nursing students about end of life care at a Swedish university Study V used co design in which patients with HF from primary care their family members and health care professionals physicians and nurses from palliative and HF care were invited to be constructive participants in the design process of a communication intervention Health care professionals participated in a first feasibility testing of the intervention Results Most Swedish HF nurses had discussed prognosis 96% and end of life care 84% with a HF patient at some point in clinical practice The nurses often reported that a physician was to have the main responsibility for such discussions 69% but that the nurse was also believed to have a role to play I Prognosis and end of life care were together with sexual activity the three least frequently discussed topics in HF clinics in both Sweden and the Netherlands II In conversations with 1 809 Swedish and Dutch HF patients prognosis was discussed with 38% of the patients and end of life care was discussed with 10% In study III patients expressed different experiences of and preferences for communication about their HF prognosis Many patients described that the health care professionals had not provided them with any prognosis information at all The patients had different understandings of HF as a chronic illness which had an impact on their preferences for communication about their prognosis III The simulation training described in the ethnographic study IV was part of an end of life care simulation during the last term of the 3 year bachelor degree level nursing education program where students learn and practice basic palliative care The students felt that the simulation training was a good opportunity to practice handling end of life situations as it gave them a chance to experience this situation and their own feelings and thoughts on death and dying In study V an intervention to improve communication about prognosis and end of life care in HF care was developed and some areas were feasibility tested Heart failure patients their families and health care professionals working in HF care or palliative care participated in the development process Health care professionals nurses and physicians participated in the following feasibility testing of the intervention Conclusions This thesis shows that prognosis and end of life care are seldom discussed with HF patients in Swedish and Dutch heart failure care and that many heart failure nurses have ambiguous attitudes towards discussing these topics with patients and their families I II The patients described that they receive different messages concerning their heart failure and that they also have different preferences for discussing the heart failure trajectory with health care professionals

The professionals need to understand the impact of heart failure on each patient and adapt the communication to each individual III End of life care simulation with skilled supervisors shows great promise for health care professionals to learn good communication skills in end of life care conversations IV A Question Prompt List and a communication course might be useful for improving communication about the heart failure trajectory in patients their families and health care professionals
