

To Dismantle Magneto

If reasonable care is exercised, the magneto may be taken apart for cleaning and inspection.

Never attempt this operation on a dirty bench or table; dirt is a bugbear to successful magneto operation. Proceed as follows:

1. Unscrew the high tension terminal R with your fingers.
2. Remove the cam housing cover F and cam housing K. Mark cam housing so that it will be replaced as taken off.
3. Remove interrupter assembly by means of mounting screw E.
4. Remove the four mounting screws which hold the interrupter end bearing in place. This will permit removal of the armature from the frame.

IMPORTANT

A piece of steel or iron should immediately be placed across the magnetic field inside of the frame to prevent weakening of the magnet. Note the condition of the metal segment CC on the collector spool AA and if dirty, clean with an ordinary lead pencil eraser. Sand paper, or other abrasives should not be used, as they will scratch the surface and cause no end of trouble.

The ball bearings Y may be pried off the armature with a small stick and should be washed in gasoline, thoroughly dried, and repacked with pure vaseline. Clean the interior of the frame and outside ball races with a gasoline dampened cloth. It should not be necessary to remove the magnet for any purpose.

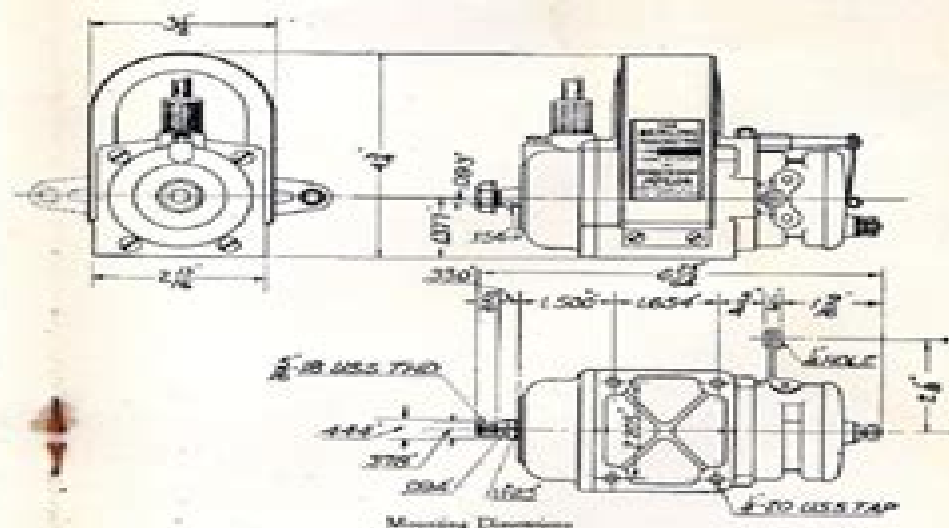

Assembly

To assemble a magneto, reverse the foregoing procedure, taking the following precaution: See that the end bearing screws are securely tightened and locked by staking the frame metal into the screw slots. Make sure that the grounding brush L on the interrupter base is clean and does not bind.

See that the key QQ on the interrupter bar fits in the key way on the armature shaft.

Tighten the interrupter mounting screw L securely.

In conclusion, do not tamper with the magneto unless you are skillful in such matters.
